

Schaefer 500 may be postponed

By CHUCK FIERSON
Record Sports Editor

LONG POND — The weather-plagued Schaefer 500 at Pocono International Raceway is apparently off again — and it may be for good.

In an announcement early Wednesday night, Bill Marvel, track manager, said the race was postponed. He cited deficiencies created by tropical storm Agnes.

But United States Auto Club officials, representing the governing body which sanctions the second leg of auto racing's Triple Crown, emphasized that drivers were ready and willing to hold the race, scheduled to start at 1 p.m. Sunday.

Marvel said "even though the track itself and all areas immediately surrounding the track are in perfect condition, all of our safety, medical, security and fire departments are at one-half strength for reasons beyond our control."

Dick King, director of competition and chief steward at Pocono, countered the statement.

"We are at an impasse," he said. "The race has not been called off. We're here and ready to run the race."

A showdown is expected about 8 a.m. today when practice sessions are to begin. Marvel said the track will lock the entrance to the pit area, thus preventing drivers from entering.

Qualifications, which were postponed from last weekend due to the storm, are to begin at 10 a.m.

Marvel said the request to postpone the race, a makeup date for which has not been decided, was based on a letter from Gov. Milton J. Shapp.

The letter, dated Monday and addressed to Dr. Joseph R. Matitoli, chief executive officer at the raceway, asked the postponement due to the "extreme emergency" in Pennsylvania.

Marvel said the track can supply only 65 of the required 106 firemen for race day. He added the medical staff can provide only one-half of its force.

But King said USAC would provide the necessary manpower to make up the shortage. King added raceway officials rejected the proposal.

"We felt that the people they would bring in would not be qualified," Marvel said.

If the raceway goes through with its lockout, it would stand to lose two major things.

First it would lose the $275,000 in prize money which has already been turned over to USAC and deposited in the bank.

Pocono would also lose its sanction, according to USAC officials.

"The track was presented to us two weeks ago," William J. Smythe, USAC's executive director said. "The sanction called for a track for practice, qualifications and a race. By withdrawing one of these the track would forfeit its sanction."

Both sides agreed that before the prize money and sanction is forfeited, it would probably go to court.

Both sides further agreed that sewerage has to be hauled to various treatment plants in the area.

One of the two sources in Wilkes-Barre is completely non-operational, Marvel said, and Wind Gap can handle only 30 per cent.

"The only thing valid was the sewerage problem," King admitted. "But this could have been worked out."

After being pressed for several moments, Marvel admitted that the actual decision for postponement — it comes about — was made Monday. The reason, he said, for not announcing it until Wednesday was because USAC asked for a delay.

"Our minds were made up Monday," he said.

Smythe, who was shown a copy of a letter from Shapp's office asking for the delay, said that he had asked in a four-hour meeting Wednesday afternoon for the governor to write a letter to him asking for the delay.

"If he would, I would go along with the postponement," he said. "But nobody would ask him to write one."

Asks legislators for $50 million

Shapp appeals for flood aid

HARRISBURG (UPI) — Gov. Milton J. Shapp asked the General Assembly Wednesday night for $50 million to start helping in flood disaster relief.

Related stories, pages 2

But the governor made no suggestions to the legislators how they should begin to rearrange his proposed budget for 1972-73 to allow for enough disaster relief money.

"These moneys will be earmarked for materials, supplies, services, food, clothing, equipment, chemicals, drugs and medicine for the alleviation of human hardship and suffering and for the protection of property," Shapp said.

Republicans wanted to appropriate more than $50 million and the Senate already is working with a proposal that would allow $100 million for flood relief.

Shapp indicated the legislature should earmark $50 million and leave enough room in the budget for the figure to increase.

"I am willing to accept cuts in my proposed budget that, because of the recent disaster, now raise other programs to the status of priority," the governor said.

"Hopefully, I will have sufficient data available at the end of this week to start drafting required emergency legislation to put Pennsylvania back on its feet."

Shapp said it was possible the need for state money for disaster relief would go beyond $50 million. If the federal government provides enough, he said, the state contribution could be less.

"The point is," he said, "that I do not know at this time and do not think anyone else really knows the precise measure of our needs for state funds."

"Therefore, let's get started now with a realistic amount and leave ourselves the flexibility to change that figure according to our needs."

Shapp spoke to the legislature about 72 hours before the end of the 1971-72 fiscal year. There still is no budget for the next fiscal year.

The governor said it might be necessary for the legislature to come back again next week to continue working on appropriations bills. A recess was scheduled to begin next week to allow Democrats to go to the party convention in Miami.

"Now," Shapp said, "let me be blunt. The state runs out of funds it can use legally Friday night. There is plenty of time for you to pass an equitable budget during the next three days."

"There is no need to complicate the process by even thinking of stop-gap appropriations."

The legislature often has used "stop-gaps," or short-term emergency appropriations, when it reaches the end of a fiscal year without a budget ready.

Appropriations Committee approves budget

Senators hike relief money

HARRISBURG (UPI) — The Senate Appropriations Committee agreed Wednesday on a $3.6 billion general appropriations program which includes $100 million for immediate flood relief.

"We feel that if nothing unforeseen takes place we will have enough votes to pass the bill Friday," said Sen. Benjamin Donolow, chairman of the committee.

Sources, however, said Senate Republicans might have some surprises in store for the Democratic majority.

The $100 million figure was the third Donolow mentioned in as many days. On Monday, he proposed $50 million and on Tuesday $25 million.

"The federal government is not answering our problems as quickly as possible," Donolow said. "If we don't need all of that $100 million, we can shift it to other areas later."

"But since the federal government is not being responsive, we've got to take the lead."

What the Appropriations Committee did was cut Gov. Milton J. Shapp's original budget request of $3.6 billion by about $130 million, and then add $100 million for flood relief and $30 million for nonpublic schools.

Among the major cuts of Shapp's proposal were $23 million from the proposed cushion for state salary increases, $14 million from the public school employees retirement fund and $10 million from the revenue sharing proposal.

Donolow said he did not consult with the governor before acting on the budget proposal.

"We had no consultations with and no consent from the governor," Donolow said. "He may well be 'teed' off at what we cut from his proposal."

"There were reports from various authoritative sources, however, that Senate Republicans would attempt to pass the same bill approved by the House, which was $148 million less than Shapp had asked for."

The Republican plan, reportedly, is to then submit a separate bill providing for $100 million in flood relief and another bill providing $30 million for nonpublic schools.

The Republicans hold 24 seats in the Senate, two less than the necessary majority. Sources said the GOP has talked two Democrats into joining their budget-cutting move, giving the Republicans enough votes to pull it off.

Donolow said he could not agree with the cuts the House made in the budget, especially from departments which will be essential to the state's flood cleanup program.

"All of these other departments, such as welfare, Environmental Resources, and Labor and Industry will play essential roles in bringing the state to its feet after this disastrous flood," Donolow said.

"We can't just pass $100 million in unspecified emergency funds and then turn around and cut the budgets of these important departments."

Police 'cultivate' marijuana

ROME, Mich. (UPI) — There they were, plain as day, 40 stalks of marijuana flourishing in the front yard of the Romeo state police post.

"I'd rather not discuss it," said Lt. Lawrence Miller, post commander.

When pressed by newsmen's questions, he answered, "We figure that someone planted it there as a joke, or that someone under arrest emptied his pockets and it planted itself," he explained.

A detective finally had spotted the plants and pulled them up, saving a six-inch stalk for the lieutenant "to show people what marijuana looks like."

House okays relief funds

WASHINGTON — The House Appropriations committee during a special session Wednesday, approved a resolution which calls for the quick funding of $200 million in relief aid to victims of area-wide flooding. It is expected that the full House will vote sometime today on the resolution. If passed, as anticipated, it will proceed immediately to the senate and then to President Nixon for his signature. The president on Tuesday asked Congress for $100 million in disaster relief funds to repair damage caused by torrential rains and record-breaking floods.

Astronaut to be evangelist

SPACE CENTER — Moon explorer James B. Irwin said Wednesday he will form his own evangelistic group, but will also work with Dr. Billy Graham in a worldwide ministry. Irwin, 42, announced last month he will retire from the astronaut corps in August to devote his time to "spreading the good news of Jesus Christ." He said Wednesday he will be "working with Dr. Graham whenever he thinks it would be effective." Irwin landed on the moon last year with David R. Scott on the Apollo 15 mission and later said the flight made him a deeper religious person.

Unemployment extended

WASHINGTON — The House Wednesday passed and sent to the Senate a bill to extend for six months the period during which jobless workers may apply for special supplemental unemployment benefits provided by the federal government on an emergency basis. The cost would be paid out of an increase in employer taxes. The measure, approved 273 to 110, would extend the eligibility period through Dec. 31. It is due to expire Friday. Under the program, unemployed persons may apply for 13 extra weeks of unemployment benefits, at an average payment of $51.65 a week, if they are still jobless when the 39-week regular period of benefits expires and if the unemployment rate in their state is 65 per cent or higher.

Troops move against enemy

SAIGON — South Vietnamese troops, following the heaviest U.S. air and sea bombardment since the Korean war and spearheaded by the elite Black Panther commando team, drove halfway to Communist-occupied Quang Tri city Wednesday, military spokesmen said Thursday. A 20,000-man government task force pushed out from the northern My Chanh River defense line 20 miles north of Hue before dawn and by zig-zagging Wednesday were grouped around Hoi Lang district town, six miles north of the My Chanh and six miles south of Quang Tri city. State postpones lottery drawing HARRISBURG (UPI) — The state Revenue Department announced Wednesday the Pennsylvania State Lottery would be postponed from July 5 to July 12 and then suspended for several weeks due to flood damage to computers and other lottery equipment.

Revenue Secretary Robert Kane said tickets dated July 5 would continue to be sold through July 11 and would be good for a drawing the following day in Beaver Falls. A "Sudden Millionaire" drawing originally scheduled for July 6 will be held July 12 at the same location, Kane said.

"Following the July 12 drawing, the lottery will be suspended for some weeks," Henry Kaplan, lotteries director, said. "It will be resumed later this summer."

Kaplan said flood waters from the overflowing Susquehanna River damaged computers housed at the former Olmstead Air Force base in Middletown and destroyed 50 million lottery tickets and stocks of special paper intended for the printing of another 50 million tickets.

Kaplan said the computers used to select winners were submerged in nine feet of water.

Top N.J. official indicted by juries

NEWARK, N.J. (UPI) — New Jersey Secretary of State Paul J. Sherwin was indicted Wednesday by federal and state grand juries for allegedly shaking down a construction firm president for a $10,000 Republican campaign contribution in exchange for a $600,000 road contract.

Sherwin, 53, has long been a close friend of Republican Gov. William T. Cahill and has worked for Cahill since 1963. Indicted with Sherwin were William C. Loughran, 43, a public relations man and Republican fund-raiser, and Michael J. Manzo, 53, the construction firm president.

Loughran allegedly arranged the payoff from Manzo to the Republican State Committee, via Sherwin, in October, 1970. Although the contract was taken from the original low bidder and was given to Manzo's firm, it was later taken away and returned to the first firm, according to federal officials.

There have been reports and indications that Manzo's anger at not getting the contract after paying the $10,000 led him to complain to law enforcement officials, triggering the state and federal investigations.

U.S. Attorney Herbert J. Stern announced the federal charges at a news conference in Newark, while state Attorney General George F. Kugler Jr. disclosed the state allegations in a statement issued in Trenton.

Sherwin called an afternoon news conference to announce he would take a leave of absence while the charges are pending but declined to discuss the matter on the advice of his attorney, who said Sherwin was innocent.

Nixon accused of delaying federal aid to flood victims

HARRISBURG (UPI) — Gov. Milton J. Shapp accused the Nixon Administration Wednesday of hampering the cleanup and delaying aid to the victims of the $1.5 billion flood disaster through massive red tape.

"I'm a little fed up with this double talk and zero action I'm getting from Washington," said Shapp, who failed on five attempts to talk to President Nixon by phone.

Shapp, looking exhausted and bleary-eyed from the six-day disaster ordeal, spoke to newsmen outside his mud-caked mansion in the city's flood-ravaged north side neighborhood.

"The federal government has sent no one to help flood victims fill out federal forms for a loan," Shapp said. "We had 150 persons milling around at a disaster center today because they can't find anyone to tell them how to fill out the forms."

Shapp said the federal government has not yet provided the loan forms for the disaster victims.

"My major fear," the governor said, "is that if we

Republicans argue over amount

Flood aid subject of bitter debate

HARRISBURG (UPI)—Pennsylvania legislators engaged in a bitter partisan debate Wednesday over which party is more concerned about flood victims.

It began when Minority Leader Rep. Kenneth B. Lee, R-Sullivan, accused Gov. Milton J. Shapp of trying to limit the state's share of aid to victims to $50 million.

Lee said Shapp's request to the Senate to put back into the budget some $150 million which was removed in the House "literally closes the door on future help."

"I know darn well you people from ravaged areas aren't going to let him get away with it," Lee said. "I want you to get right over there and try to beat some sense in his head. Whether you do it physically or otherwise it's immaterial to me."

Upon the formal protest of a Democratic legislator, Lee later retracted the reference to physical violence.

Lee called Shapp a "demago-

Bremer enters insanity plea

UPPER MERIDEN, Md. (UPI) — Arthur H. Bremer Wednesday changed his plea to innocent by reason of insanity to state charges growing out of the May 15 attempt on Gov. George C. Wallace's life and was ordered to take mental examination despite his lawyer's objections.

Bremer's attorney, Benjamin Lipsitz, changed his plea from not guilty at a pretrial hearing before Chief Circuit Judge Ralph W. Powers.

Powers accepted the plea and ordered the 21-year-old former Milwaukee busboy sent to Clifton T. Perkins State Hospital for psychiatric tests despite Lipsitz's objections that the examination could lead Bremer to incriminate himself in the shooting.

Comparing the insanity plea to a plea of self defense in which no questioning by a psychiatrist would be required, the lawyer argued that Bremer should "not be compelled to cooperate with the prosecution, simply because of an insanity defense."

Powers heard arguments from both sides on the spot and rules against Lipsitz.

Although attempted murder charges were dropped earlier, Bremer still faces several state charges which carry a possible maximum prison term of 123 years on conviction. They range from assault with intent to murder to gun law violations.

Small gain recorded in economy

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A closely watched barometer of the future health of the economy recorded its smallest advance in nearly a year in May, the government reported Wednesday. This cast a small cloud over otherwise optimistic forecasts of the economy's recovery.

The Commerce Department's index of leading economic indicators rose just 0.2 per cent last month, the poorest performance since last June's zero gain.

The index samples action in 12 diverse areas, such as building permits, stock prices and durable goods orders. Over the years, it has shown an ability to move up and down ahead of similar movements in the overall economy.

Nixon sets television conference

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Nixon will hold his nationally broadcast news conference at 9 p.m. EDT today, his first such session with reporters in more than a year.

His last nationwide radio and television press conference was on June 1, 1971. He held a non-broadcast meeting with the reporters last Thursday, his third for the year, but limited most questions to domestic issues.

Today's press conference will be open to questions on all subjects, including the Vietnam war and foreign policy.

Late in the day Wednesday, Nixon flew to Camp David with Mrs. Nixon.

don't have the forms and the people to help the flood victims fill them out, then how long will it take to get them processed."

Shapp was asked who or what was responsible for the delays.

"I think to a great extent it is the procedures involved," he said. "They have a procedure there that is full of red tape. Only 35 counties have been declared federal disaster areas but we're already working to clean up flood damage in 62 counties."

"I say the hell with the paper work. We've got to get this work done."

"One of these days we're going to have an awful fight with the federal government over who owes how much to whom. But we're going to go ahead and take care of the people and fight with them later."

The governor said that the extent of federal assistance so far has been five books on the federal disaster law and forms from the Army Corps of Engineers. He said both are inadequate.

Democrats and Republicans.

Rep. Earl Vann, D-Philadelphia, said while the legislature was concerned about flood victims, it consistently ignored the needs of Philadelphians.

"The minority leader is angry," he said. "Well, I am angry too, but mine didn't start this week. I have been angry week after week when I see politics played against the city of Philadelphia and the school district of Philadelphia."

"What we saw was people working together to overcome the devastation," he said.

Irvis said Shapp's complaints about federal red tape were not partisan.

"I'm not blaming President Nixon or the Republicans," he said. "It would have been the same thing with the Democrats in control of Washington, but it still is a fact."

Rep. James J. Gallen, R-Berks, said he resented Irvis accusing Lee of playing politics "when the majority leaders was the only one who talked about

Disaster funds approved

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The House Appropriations Committee Wednesday voted $200 million for disaster relief to flood-ravaged sections of the East and South Dakota.

The bulk of the appropriated money would go for temporary housing, disaster unemployment compensation, and the repair and rebuilding of roads, the committee said.

The Senate has approved legislation also granting $200 million for disaster relief, but in a different parliamentary form, so differences would have to be worked out even if the bill is approved by the House.

An Appropriations Committee spokesman said an effort probably would be made Thursday to gain unanimous consent from House members to suspend normal rules and pass the measure immediately.

The Appropriations Committee originally was asked to approve only $100.

Daley urges gun ban

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Chicago Mayor Richard J. Daley charged Wednesday that gun manufacturers and dealers help finance the National Rifle Association and that they should be required to help pay the funeral expenses of persons killed with handguns.

Daley also suggested that rifles and shotguns be registered as he testified before House Judiciary Committee hearings on a bill that would prohibit private citizens from acquiring handguns, but which would not confiscate those already owned.

Blaming the NRA for what he called lack of adequate gun controls, Daley said, "There is no doubt that the organization (is) being financed by gun manufacturers and dealers in addition to the revenue from membership dues."

He also suggested means to take "the profits out of the gun business. For example manufacturers could be required to assume some of the burden of paying for the funeral expenses, the hospital fees, the losses suffered by the victims of violence with handguns."

An NRA spokesman denied that the one-million-member organization drew any funds from gun manufacturers or dealers, other than revenue from advertisements carried in its official journal, "The American Rifleman."

10,000 S. Vietnam troops fight to retake province

SAIGON (UPI)—More than 10,000 South Vietnamese troops advanced through Quang Tri Province Wednesday behind a pulverizing U.S. air and naval bombardment in a drive aimed at retaking the only province of South Vietnam captured by the Communists.

A South Vietnamese spokesman said two brigades of paratroopers and two brigades of marines, backed by at least a pair of tank squadrons, crossed the My Chanh River northern defense line before dawn and by evening had pushed up to five miles into Quang Tri Province.

Battlefield reports said the South Vietnamese were advancing against stiff North Vietnamese resistance. A government spokesman said 235 Communists were killed during the first stages of the drive while the South Vietnamese lost 7 killed and 41 wounded.

Military sources said many other South Vietnamese units joined the original 10,000-man force during the day, but the Saigon command imposed an embargo on news about the additional forces.

Even as the South Vietnamese drive progressed, President Nixon announced 10,000 more GIs would be pulled out of Vietnam over the next two months, reducing the U.S. troop level to 39,000 by Sept. 1.

At the same time, Presidential Press Secretary Ronald L. Ziegler, told newsmen in Washington Nixon plans to continue the bombing of North Vietnam and the mining of

Thieu gives himself unlimited new powers

SAIGON (UPI) — President Nguyen Van Thieu signed early Wednesday a law passed by a bare quorum of pro-government senators in an extraordinary semisecret meeting to give him almost unlimited power for six months.

Senate Speaker Nguyen Van Huyen, an independent who has supported Thieu on issues in the past, denounced the 28-0 vote as "illegal and valueless."

But Thieu signed the bill only hours after it was passed and before any other legislative action could be taken. It was considered highly unlikely that the cumbersome court system would deal with the law before it expired.

It was the second time Thieu had sought the widening special powers. A vaguer measure he proposed shortly after Quang Tri Province fell to the Communists was killed by the 60-member Senate in May.

Professionals protect community

(Editor's note: This is the third of four articles on Hemlock Farms, a total living community that is the vanguard of the concept of planning an entire residential unit to fit human needs).

By JOE MIEGOC
Pocono Record Reporter

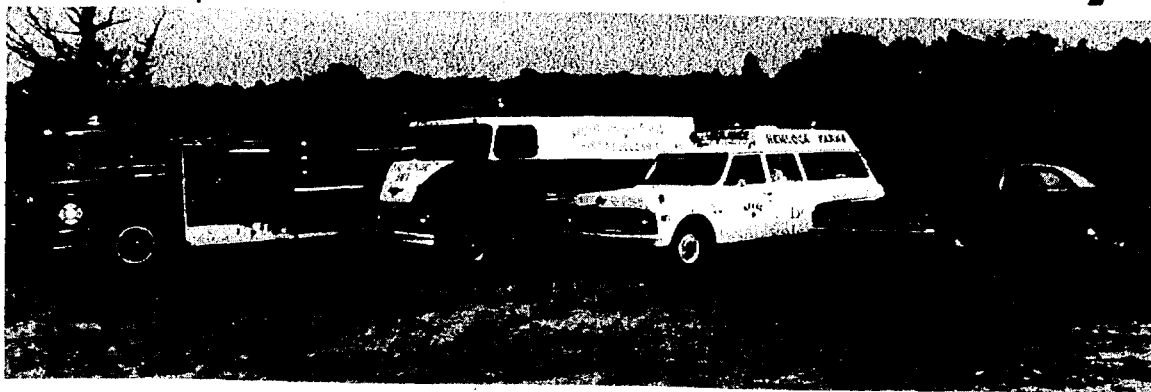

LORDS VALLEY — "We have a fantastic apprehension record as far as the crime rate goes here."

Sgt. Robert Scott Jr., chief deputy for the Hemlock Farms police force, said this matter-of-factly when discussing crime problems at one of the Poconos' newest land developments.

"Our rate, as far as apprehension and successful prosecution goes, is 98 per cent," said Scott, explaining that this figure covered all felonies and vandalism during the four years the force has been in existence.

Scott and his deputy, Herb Weaver, an Army veteran, are on duty 24 hours a day in a split shift setup, with headquarters in the community building. "We try to provide complete and continuous protection to Hemlock Farms," said Scott, adding that he and Weaver actually work under and report to Arthur Jensen, Pike County sheriff, even though their salaries are paid by the Hemlock Farms Community Assn.

"We are also occasionally called in by the sheriff in investigations in this area, including accidents along the highways bordering us," said Scott. "We can also arrest residents of Hemlock Farms for violations of their own's deed, which prohibits reckless driving on private property," he said, adding that it hasn't happened yet.

Police, fire and emergency vehicles used at Hemlock Farms

Scott also said that the police operate their own photo lab, with the picture of the service vehicle fleet a product from that lab. "We also have done photography work for the State Police on accidents near here," he said.

Both Scott and Weaver have extensive training in police and related activities.

Scott has had eight years experience as a police officer and has attended Northwestern University's Accident Investigation and Prevention School and also its Radar Control School. He has also attended the Pennsylvania State Police 40-hour field course, a 20-hour course in narcotics investigation and identification, holds an advanced Red Cross First Aid card, is a licensed commercial pilot and has had three years of college.

Weaver has attended the International Association of Chiefs of Police School in France, which includes 240 hours of training, is a recent graduate of the Federal Bureau of Investigation's 40-hour field course in criminal investigation and has also completed a course in police-community relations.

The Fire Department comes equally well-staffed. The Chief of the Hemlock Farms unit is James McBride, a retired Battalion Commander from the New York City Fire Department. The chief is a resident of the community, thus keeping the involvement on a local basis.

The department has a 1,000 gallon-per-minute pumper, which it purchased new in 1970, a rescue truck, which was the first of its kind in the area and also the services of a Chevrolet Ambulance, which was also purchased new.

"This department is run strictly on a volunteer basis," said Scott, adding that its range of responsibility would extend to Routes 84, 402 and 209 if needed. "We have as many as 13 house fires per year, with ambulance calls ranging to 180 per year. We've handled brush fires, car fires and one fish truck fire when the fish smelled for days," Scott laughed.

The ambulance corps is also a volunteer group, with the captain of the corps also being a registered nurse. Members have to have standard and advanced Red Cross training under state regulations.

Scott's wife, Sally, is a first lieutenant in the corps. She said that the ambulance is capable of handling any emergency.

"We've been fortunate that nothing serious has come up, but if it does we're ready," she said. "We get our funds through donations plus two fund appeals which we hold each year. The women's club also donates the receipts from its drives," she said.

"There is a real need for this service here," she said, "since the other area facilities are so far away. They are so far away and time is always so important."

Membership of the fire department and ambulance corps is always kept at its full level of 35, with no real need at any time for members. "It seems we always have more than enough. These people have to take a course to be qualified, but they are really dedicated. We also have three registered nurses within the organization, she said.

Sgt. Scott later said that he feels his department is eminently qualified. "We've been extensively trained and prepared. There have been some statements from the County Sheriff's office that some policemen in the County are not qualified, but I hope they weren't talking about us," he said.

Both the police department and the fire department ambulance corps are tied into the development's communication system through the switchboard in the development office. Residents call the community office building, which in turn gets in touch with the patrol cars through the two-way radio system.

Band concert

BLAIRSTOWN — The Blairstown Rotary Club will sponsor the third annual band concert featuring the Newton High School Symphonic Band on Wednesday, July 19 from 7:30 p.m. to 8:30 p.m. The concert, which is absolutely free to the public will be held on the playground in the rear of the Blairstown Elementary School, however in the event of rain, the concert will be held in the school's gymnasium. There is plenty of free parking and everyone is invited to this free band concert.

MOUNT POCONO — Kids, get ready, the circus is coming to Mt. Pocono!

The star-studded 1972 edition of the Royal Wild West Circus is coming to town July 4 and 5, featuring an elephant act (what circus would be complete without one?), performing poodles, a horse intelligence act, clowns, aerialists, acrobats and rope spinners in a program sponsored by the Mt. Pocono Rotary Club.

"Our organization is bringing the circus here to enable the children of the community to enjoy a traditionally wholesome form of entertainment, unique in America," said Glen Kissell, general manager of Pocono Manor and president of the Mt. Pocono Rotary Club.

The Royal Circus, more than 50 years old, appears exclusively for leading civic and charitable organizations, making it possible for such groups to raise funds for their community projects while providing top-notch entertainment for area children.

The Rotary Club has contracted for two, hour and one-half performances at 2 and 8 p.m. at the Mt. Pocono Firehouse Grounds under the high canvas tent known as the "Big Top," with profits from the appearances going toward the club's Community Fund. Kissell further explained that the Rotary Club will receive 50 per cent of the proceeds from advance ticket sales.

Baby Cuddles, the elephant act, will perform complicated pachydermic feats involving physical equilibrium, including balancing exercises on a small elevated platform. This act from the so-called "Old Circus" will be combined with the dash and excitement of the Wild West within the confines of the huge canvas tent.

A globe-travelling Wild West star, Hoot Hilton and his Wonder Horse, High Chaparell, will present an exhibition of horse intelligence, or, should we say, "horse sense." The horse will indicate answers to numerical problems by stomping his hoofs and has also been known to stop the act to pose for an enterprising photographer who approaches the circus ring.

"The circus is for all kids, regardless of their ages," said Paul Asure, general chairman of the circus project, in alluding to the "you're as young as you feel" adage.

Assure also said that the Rotary Club and Circus are sponsoring a contest which will provide a name for "No-Name," a clown performing with the circus. "We are seeking a name for the clown for 1973," said Asure, explaining that the winner will be announced at the 2 p.m. matinee performance.

The contest is open to all children 12 years of age and under, with entry blanks available at Memory Studio and Camera Shop in Mt. Pocono.

Annual July 4 celebration

Hawley sets turn of century parade

HAWLEY — Once again Hawley turns back the clock as the local library association sponsors its seventh annual "turn of the century" parade and lawn social Tuesday, July 4. Mrs. Richard M. Murphy is chairman.

The celebration is a project of the Hawley Library Assn. as its principal fund raising effort to supply library service to the community and to maintain the library building and grounds.

The building was given to the library in 1966 by Roger M. Blough, former chairman of U. S. Steel, in honor of his wife, Helen Decker Blough, a Hawley native. Mr. and Mrs.

Blough, their twin daughters and their grandchildren are expected to take part in the celebration again this year.

The celebration will begin at noon when the parade, complete with ladies in Edwardian dresses, antique automobiles and a brass band, steps off from the eastern end of Main Avenue. The line of march is along Main Avenue through the business section and terminating at the library grounds.

Library officials have dispensed with the usual patriotic program at Bingham Park because of crowding at the booths during the Bingham Park program and because of the crowds which have in the past impeded traffic.

This year's parade will conclude at the library with the raising of the flag and the singing of the national anthem. Only following this will the booths be opened and the social begin.

At 1:30 p.m. one of the most popular events of the social, the "Grandmother's Attic" auction will be conducted by auctioneer Thomas Howells. Articles to be offered range from antiques and near-antiques, kitchen furnishings and lamps, to bric-a-brac for decorating the cottage.

Now to the lawn social this year, and expected to be one of the big attractions, will be a demonstration of pottery throwing by Ken Sproson, an authority in the field.

Ray LaTourneau will demonstrate the art of glass cutting and again specially cut goblets commemorating the event will be available, which the Hawley Woman's Club will once more sponsor and staff the white elephant booth.

Hawley merchants continue to support the library with one of the most interesting displays, a "merchants booth" where gifts from local shopkeepers may be purchased blind at a fraction of their retail value.

Children will delight in the toy crib and coloring books, in the fish pond and ice cream and hot dog booths, and for those so inclined — which seems each year to be the majority — there will be two cake sales as well as booths featuring jams, jellies, relishes and cookies.

Mobile homes need permit

AVOCA — Due to the presence of gypsy moths, a special quarantine has been established on mobile homes at trailer parks in 13 eastern Pennsylvania counties.

Mobile homes must have a permit from the U.S. Department of Agriculture before they can be moved from mobile home parks in Berks, Bucks, Carbon, Lackawanna, Lehigh, Luzerne, Monroe, Montgomery, Northampton, Philadelphia, Pike Schuylkill, and Wayne Counties.

This quarantine does not apply to camping vehicles or individual trailers not in mobile home parks.

Laurel Blossom tour begins today in Jim Thorpe area

JIM THORPE — The first annual Laurel Blossom Festival House Garden Tour in Carbon County will be held from 1 to 5 p.m. today.

Jim Thorpe hostesses who have consented to open their homes to the public are Mrs. Cy Apfelbaum, 110 Broadway, where visitors will see a home built in the Victorian manner; Mrs. James J. Dougherty, 5 West Broadway, whose home abounds with beautiful antiques; and Mrs. John Cresci, 54 West Broadway which was built 99 years ago and has been completely restored in the Mediterranean style while also featuring valuable antiques.

The famed Asa Packer Mansion to the rear of the courthouse in the county seat community will also be open at no extra charge to those who purchase tickets for the tour.

Since Carbon County has many resort or second homes and tourism is spurring the regional economy on an increasing scale, several homes in the Split Rock area of Lake

Harmony will also be open to the public.

Mrs. William Groves will be hostess to those who visit her recently-built Mediterranean style home on Lake Drive. This year-round dwelling features a commanding view of picturesque Lake Harmony from the living room, dining room and the bedrooms.

Mrs. Hilliard Smuck, Crest and Forest Drives, will show her vacation home, styled for convenience and easy living.

At the home of Mrs. John Adams, those on the tour will have an opportunity to relax with a cup of punch while enjoying the woodland garden with its many native plants and wild flowers.

Another type of vacation home, with Mrs. Phillip Myers as hostess, will also be visited, representing a small cottage in a woodland setting.

On tour day, tickets may be procured at the new Visitors' Information Center, at the CNJ rail station, Jim Thorpe, and at Split Rock Lodge, Lake Harmony.

Watch who calls who 'radical'

Vice President Spiro Agnew the other day attacked Senator George McGovern for the presidential candidate's statements of the past which, in essence, place McGovern squarely in the center of socialism.

Agnew reminded his audience that McGovern, who is almost assured of a first ballot nomination for president at the Democratic National Convention, advocates government ownership of railroads and other mass transportation, in addition to radical federal health insurance and other federalizations.

McGovern has been dubbed as being very much a radical candidate. The radicalism, which up to now has been attributed primarily to obtaining the support of the young voters, was traced by Agnew to a political philosophy of the 1940s. This philosophy was the socialist platform at the time of Franklin Roosevelt.

Not far off

But taking 1972, McGovern's so-called radicalism — even in comparison with the Nixon administration — isn't so far off from the current center of American politics.

Let's take the government ownership of railroads, for instance.

The nation's railroads are bankrupt, the Erie-Lackawanna Railway being the latest to join the fold.

What has the Republican Nixon administration done about the bankrupt Penn Central? In essence, it is now federally operated. Also, during the Nixon administration, the nation received something called Amtrak — a federally operated rail passenger network.

And, during the Nixon administration, we have subsidies for mass transportation. Regardless of your political viewpoint, based on these facts, you would have to recognize that the government has a lot to say about mass transportation, based on the millions of dollars pumped into these "private" corporations.

As for federal health insurance, the Republican Nixon administration has also advocated such a system. McGovern proposes only to take Nixon's system further, as does Ted Kennedy.

While Agnew talks about radicalism on McGovern's part, it must be taken in the context of radicalism today. In the strict sense of the word, one couldn't help but pin the same label on Nixon.

Socialistic move?

Nixon, remember, is a conservative and a Republican. And yet, he pushed for a hefty federal loan guarantee for Lockheed (is this not subsidizing private industry — a socialistic move?); he actively sought friendly relations with arch-enemy Red China; actively sought and obtained arms controls with the Soviet Union, which is governed by a political philosophy the Republicans — especially conservative Republicans — abhor.

Agnew's speech was strictly political, with a resurrection of the 1940s socialism philosophy. As we have pointed out, McGovern can't really wear the same label today.

What it all means, based on the liberal Democratic platform and Nixon's record, is that the voter will have to really concentrate during this year's presidential campaign, which shapes up as being one of the most politically unprecedented in this nation's history.

Light side

With Gene Brown

First things first

The writer's most satisfactory tag line happened during my early association with Jim Ottaway when he had only three papers in his group.

One of our executives, separated from his wife for a number of years, took up with another woman and set up housekeeping. The legitimate wife complained to Jim about this uncommon arrangement and Jim, much disturbed about the morality of the problem, asked her how she knew about it.

The wife replied: "I crept under their bedroom window and heard him cough."

Jim then reported the incident at a meeting of several associates and asked what should we do under these circumstances.

Realizing the moral principles involved in the matter and at the same time somewhat sympathetic with our executive's problem, unconsciously and with the greatest good will I replied:

"It seems to me that the first thing we do is cure his cough."

The Pennsylvania Story

Mason Denison

HARRISBURG — When Gov. Milton J. Shapp pledged to make 1972 the "Year of the Consumer" in the Keystone State he promised to introduce various pieces of legislation aimed at helping the general public get a better shake.

One of those pieces is a No-Fault automobile insurance package introduced in the Senate.

This is not the first try by the governor and his Insurance Commissioner Herbert S. Denenberg to give the people of the Commonwealth what they call a fair break on auto insurance.

The first bill, a pure, no-fault measure, was strongly opposed by the Pennsylvania Trial Lawyers Association and the Insurance Federation.

Not — so — tough

The new bill is a not-so-tough version of the original.

But compromise or not, it will be one of the best no-fault bills in the United States if it becomes law — and this bill seems to have a fairly good chance since it has the backing of 14 State Senators who joined to co-sponsor it.

Like the original bill, the new one makes liability and no-fault coverage compulsory. Unlike the original, the new bill does not cover properly damage claims, which will continue to be covered as they are now.

What the new bill does provide is $50,000 in medical expenses, $9,100 in wage loss and the injured person will be allowed to sue for any uncompensated economic loss.

The great advantage of no-fault is that automatic medical expenses will be paid regardless of who was at fault in an accident. This eliminates long waits for compensation while a court tries to determine who caused the accident and the amount of compensation to be awarded.

'Expert' analysis

We traditional types who produce written words can look with a certain envy on the electronic crowd who put out the word via TV. If we make a mistake, it's hard to cover up. There the wretched thing lies, in the files or in the library stacks. But the TV commentator is immune. His words have enormous impact, and they do help to create lasting moods. But who even remembers what they were after a few days, let alone a few weeks? The TV commentator hardly ever has to eat his words. He just goes on to the next day's events.

But let us return — it will be illuminating — to the TV pundits' reaction to President Nixon's May 8 speech announcing the bombing and mining in North Vietnam.

"I would suspect," concluded Eric Sevareid, "that the summit will not come off."

Nixon's approach

Well, Richard Nixon suspected that the summit would come off, because he had so arranged things that the Soviets had a substantial stake in its coming off — irrespective of what we were dropping on the North Vietnamese.

Charles Collingwood gave us the benefit of his own global expertise, thusly: "Certainly the Moscow summit meeting, from which so much had been expected, is now in jeopardy." That "certainly" in Collingwood's formulation is a collector's item and will be cherished by the connoisseur.

Marvin Kalb shared the general euphoria at CBS over the prospects of holding the summit: "One casualty of the President's mining and blockade may well be his upcoming summit to Moscow. Those who began packing and dreaming of caviar are beginning to unpack and returning to some dry cereal."

On and on went the Anvil Chorus. Here's NBC's John Chancellor: "The summit is in jeopardy today." Here's Richard Valeriani: "How can they receive him now? ABC's Ted Koppel: 'I don't see how he can go.' Edmund Stevens of NBC: "The President's announcement will be pretty hard for them to swallow. It practically killed the prospects of a summit."

H. L. Mencken once mused on how he would behave if, after a lifetime of evangelical atheism, he at last to his own surprise arrived before St. Peter at the pearly gates. "Gentlemen," Mencken decided he would say, "I was wrong." If you think that the above commentators are going to make a similar declaration, well, don't hold your breath.

More than mistake

The chorus of gloom, however, is worth reflecting on for a moment, for it was more than just a mistake. Any professional analyst would — one certainly supposes — have considered the concrete context of the summit, and assessed the Soviet stake in it as weighed against the Soviet stake in the success of General Giap's offensive. Such an assessment almost inevitably would issue in a more complex formulation than anyone above actually gave, something like: "If stabilization in central Europe, some arms limitation, and substantial trade agreements weigh more heavily in the Kremlin's judgment than Soviet influence in Hanoi, then the chances are that the summit will take place."

I suspect that the analytical failure on the part of the TV commentators did not really come from any defect of intelligence. It came, rather, from the desire — well-nigh universal on the networks — to present everything concerning Vietnam in the gloomiest possible terms. They are against the war, and therefore against the mining.

System of paying

They should. The present system of paying for auto injuries is a disaster. The litigation, the long wait for compensation while a case is moving through the courts, and the exorbitant auto insurance rates necessitated by large court awards, make no-fault the most sensible alternative.

The insurance companies should go for it too. While the prices they charge for individual insurance policies will go down, so will the amount they have to pay out in the event of a suit. And the amount they lose should be offset by the fact that the bill will make auto insurance compulsory.

This will increase the number of policies. The Legislature too should be happy with the bill. They won't be making any great enemies with the lawyers or the insurance companies, and they will have the satisfaction of knowing that they are beginning something which people want and need. Support of the no-fault bill also should make good campaign material this fall!

This may be one of the most important pieces of legislation, from the citizens' point of view, to come out of the offices of the Shapp Administration.

After his retirement, President Johnson published selective excerpts from the secret papers to demonstrate how right and reasonable he had been. He omitted the portions that made him look wrong and unreasonable.

President Nixon also released sensitive information, strictly for political reasons, about Henry Kissinger's secret Vietnam negotiations. The President used the information to reply to his critics.

The power to classify information must be recognized for what it is. It is nothing less than the absolute authority of the government to make a state secret of whatever it wishes. This divine right to classify documents has been abused to a degree beyond toleration.

Not only does the government sweep its bungles and blunders, its errors and embarrassments under the secrecy labels. But our entire foreign policy and defense posture remains secret except for what the federal establishment thinks is in its own interest to make public.

The tragic, bitter lessons of Vietnam have shown the fateful consequences of allowing any president to exercise power in splendid isolation behind the double walls of executive privilege and official secrecy.

We will continue, therefore, to publish information that the government seeks to hide from the public by classifying.

Editor, The Record:

I read with some sympathy and emotion the anti-abortion appeal "From an Aborted Child," by Anne Pineau, on your editorial page June 22. But I must admit that the abortion of a month-old fetus causes in me nothing approaching the anguish I feel when I regard the hundreds of thousands of unwanted, unloved children. And the thousands of young women forced by a Puritan society to search out unsanitary abortions, who were murdered by a clothes-hanger-wielding "doctor." No, my heart bleeds far more for unwanted children and dead mothers than for unborn foeta.

So, permit me to adapt Ms. Pineau's eloquence and offer a message from an unknown, but very real, "child allowed to be born."

"My eyes see the other human beings — the killers, the pushers. My eyes see the sunset and the stars, both yellow through my city's air. But they will never see the powerful waves of the ocean, for I am too poor to go there. My eyes will shed many tears, and if they show a twinkle, it is nothing but a tear yet unshed."

"My ears will never hear the rustle of leaves in the wind, only the death-rattle of old newspapers blowing on a filthy street. They will never hear a bird chirping, for I am afraid to go into the park. They will never hear someone call out my name or listen to words of love, for there is no one to love me."

"My mouth will speak only hate, as on hate it was bred. It will taste only the dirty air and the rust-red water of my city. Its lips will form smiles of cruelty, and its kisses will be those of unloving passion; a mirror to the world that reared me.

"My nose tries to smell a plastic flower in my sister's hat. It can't. It searches the air for the scent of new-mown grass, but all it smells is hot concrete. For breakfast my nose sniffs fatty bacon, and the sweet-sick odor from the overflowing toilet nobody will fix."

"My arms will reach out to the call of a needle, and the soft warm seag will flow through my veins, shutting out the world that hates me. They will hang on the neck of my pusher and will kill for the money he asks."

"My legs will only carry me running drunkenly away from The Man, my feet pounding hard on unyielding concrete. They carry me unseeing past the dying man on the stoop, for I was taught not to care. When my feet crunch in the snow, I am cold, for I have no warmth to sustain me."

"My mind cares nothing for the mysteries of life, or the ills that blight mankind. My mind is too busy trying to keep me alive. I will never experience the wonders of youth, for I was born an old man."

"Yes, I should be a child, but I am dead! You ask why? I was born to parents who wouldn't love. They didn't want me, but they couldn't stop me."

"The two people who denied themselves nothing, deny me. If you ever meet them, teach them, please, how they could have prevented all my sorrow. Better never to have been born, than to live out a life alone and unwanted, feeding on white powder, crying, in a concrete playpen."

Social Security not welfare

Editor, The Record:

I am receiving Social Security benefits and feel I am entitled to them as I paid for them for 35 years.

It is very nice to get increases, but why do the young people have to pay for these increases? Isn't it because of welfare?

I resent the fact that Social Security and welfare are lumped together. I earned what I am receiving. Welfare should be an entirely different department.

Our senators and congressmen vote for increases in Social Security. They do so because people on welfare collect as much as we on Social Security do.

If Social Security is as successful as our government people say it is and there is quite a large sum of money in the program, why tax our young people?

"What produced this change in Soviet attitudes? Were they acting on DRV (North Vietnamese) behest? Or were they now willing to put pressure on Hanoi in pursuit of interest of their own?"

"Only a little light is shed on these questions by the materials relating to Kosygin's stay in London. He was apparently willing to transmit proposals for DRV consideration more or less uncritically. While he argued the general merits of the DRV's side of the war, he did not try to bargain or alter specifics of the proposals transmitted to him."

"What is more striking is that he did not react adversely to the substance of the principal de-escalatory proposal under discussion — the termination of all DRV infiltration and supply into SVN in exchange for a US halt in attacks on the North and in troop level augmentation."

Intercepted call

"Entirely apart from the sequence in which these steps would be taken, their long term result for the Communists, would be extremely adverse militarily. Yet on February 13, he was overheard (by telephone intercept) to tell Brezhnev (the Communist party chief) of a great possibility of achieving the aim, if the Vietnamese will understand the present situation that we have passed to them; and they will have to decide. . . ."

"In a retrospective discussion with Thompson (then the U.S. ambassador) in Moscow, Kosygin expressed a jaundiced view of the role of mediators, saying they either complicated the problem or pretended they were doing something when in fact they were not."

"He had stepped into this uncomfortable spot in London because the Vietnamese had for the first time stated they were ready to negotiate if the bombings were stopped unconditionally; this was the first time they had done so. . . ."

"How much the Russians had hoped in fact to accomplish during Kosygin's London trip is impossible to know. They apparently harbored few expectations after his return. Kosygin complained to Thompson about the 'ultimatum' implied in the final proposal he transmitted to Hanoi from London, saying that he knew it was hopeless the minute he read it. . . ."

This incident illustrated how little influence the Kremlin had over the North Vietnamese. It was the beginning, however, of an increased Soviet interest in ending the Vietnam War."

Shapp schedules national conference

States take strong stand on land use

By JOHN V. CONTI
Dow Jones — Ottawa News

Americans are beginning to change the rules that govern the use of their most basic resource: the land.

Some key elements of the change, such as recent court-ordered revisions in suburban zoning laws, are already well known to the public. Less well known is the action, both passed and pending, in more than a score of state legislatures and in Congress that promises significantly to broaden state control over land use.

Taken together, they add up to what a recent report to the president's Council on Environmental Quality calls "the quiet revolution in land-use control."

The change promises to affect nearly everyone from big land developers to individual home owners. For although quiet, the revolution raises questions that range from broad constitutional ones such as altering long-established notions of property rights.

The struggle promises to help spur a redistribution among local, state and national levels of some of the basic powers of government.

It's likely to become enmeshed in debate over such emotional issues as the building of subsidized housing for the poor in the suburbs. And it could provide a central forum for resolving a wide range of growth-versus-the-environment questions that now are debated on many fronts.

"Land-use planning is the focal point around which a hell of a lot of decision-making occurs," says a staff member of the Senate Interior Committee.

Years ago, the states chose to put virtually all responsibility for regulating the use of the land in the hands of municipal and county governments. Through the combination of zoning laws and building and tax codes, local officials control the siting — and sometimes the cost and quality — of everything from houses to hospitals. It's with their approval that farmlands are converted to factories or paved over for parking lots.

Now, states are beginning to take back some of this authority. The reason: Fragmented control simply can't cope with today's problems of protecting the environment, minimizing the chaos or urban sprawl and providing adequate space for housing and industry that increasingly sweep across city and county boundaries.

In capsule form, here's what's happening:

— Within the past two years, Maine, Vermont, and Florida have passed laws bringing many types of new developments under state control. In much of Vermont, for instance, the state must grant a permit for any development bigger than one acre. Previously, only Hawaii had statewide land-use laws.

Close to a score of other states have enacted broad state controls restricting development of shorelands, scenic areas, river valleys and other special areas, supplanting, to various degrees, local zoning authority.

Regional commissions with strong land-use powers have been created to regulate development around unique environmental areas, such as San Francisco Bay, Lake Tahoe and in some three million acres of private land in New York's Adirondack Park.

Pennsylvania and Michigan are among more than a dozen states, many heavily industrialized, that are studying ways of increasing state regulation of new development. Pennsylvania Gov. Milton Shapp had scheduled a two-day "national conference on land policy" in Harrisburg this week, but it has been postponed because of the flood. It aims to bring state and local officials from throughout the country up to date on the newest developments in state land-use control. The speakers will include authorities on environmental and planning problems.

Other states are setting standards that local governments must follow in making land-use decisions. Massachusetts, for instance, reviews local zoning laws to insure that adequate space is set aside for low-cost housing. Colorado last month set state-wide standards covering such things as tree removal and drainage for all new residential and commercial subdivisions.

And at the national level, Congress is preparing to debate bills that greatly would aid this trend by providing funds to states that adopt state-level land-use policies. One proposal introduced by the Nixon administration, would encourage state planning in special areas of historic, scenic or ecological value; for such large-scale developments as "new towns," and for areas "impacted" by big new facilities such as a major jetport.

Drastic overhaul of U.S. justice system proposed

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Declaring that "American society as we have known it, cannot endure" if crime continues to soar, a respected research panel proposed Wednesday a drastic overhaul of the criminal justice system, outlawing of handguns, and legalization of marijuana and gambling.

The recommendations were contained in a report by the research and policy committee of the Committee for Economic Development (CED), a private, nonpartisan study group of business leaders and educators. The CED panel was headed by Emilio G. Collado, executive vice president of Standard Oil Co. of New Jersey, and Philip M. Klutznick, chairman of Urban Investment and Development Co.

To improve criminal justice, the panel recommended creation of an independent federal agency, the "Federal Authority to Ensure Justice," and unified state judicial systems to oversee all such operations except police work and pretrial detention.

Enough federal and state judgeships would be created to permit immediate trial of all felony cases and to eliminate caseload congestion of the courts that encourages plea bargaining, the group said.

All judges and state and local prosecutors would be appointed on grounds of merit rather than politics.

The federal agency, essentially a high-level government policy making and planning authority, would contribute half of all state and local costs for police, prosecution, courts and correctional agencies. The committee said the federal share would have been about $5 billion in 1971, compared to the estimated $16 billion annual cost of crimes against business alone.

"It would be hard to exaggerate the enormity of the national predicament," the committee said. "During the decade of the 1960s, (FBI) index crimes of violence known to the police rose 156 per cent; offenses against property, 180 per cent."

"If these and other crimes are permitted to double or treble again in the 1970s, American society as we have

36,900 homeless due to flooding

HARRISBURG (UPI) — Red Cross officials say updated figures show over 36,900 Pennsylvania families suffered losses in last week's flooding.

The Red Cross said 780 homes were destroyed, 14,909 homes had major damage and 24,810 sustaining minor damage.

Officials said 114 mobile homes were destroyed and 500 suffered major damage.

Over 2,500 business establishments were destroyed or damaged and 2,100 farm buildings received damage, officials said.

known it cannot endure ... only the strongest measures ... can avert a worse disaster than the one we already see about us."

The committee recommended:

— Private importation, distribution and possession of handguns and parts or ammunition should be declared federal and state crimes. Only national and state governments should own handguns, and would issue them only on a temporary basis to authorized persons under careful regulation. Manufacture should be halted until existing inventories are exhausted, then resumed under strict controls.

Ann Landers

Don't ask why

Dear Ann Landers: Two years ago I learned my husband was a homosexual and had been one for most of his life. Our marriage had been fairly compatible up to that time. We did have a sex life, but it was not very active or satisfactory. He asked for a divorce because he wanted to live with another man.

When we told our parents we were separating they insisted that we get counseling. The more we fought it the harder they pressed. They kept saying, "You two belong together. Try harder. You can make it..." My husband became so frustrated he couldn't work. He lost his job. I felt myself going to pieces.

All the while my mother kept pressuring, "Have a baby! Have a baby!" His mother called every day and begged me to stand by her son "in his hour of need." Finally I told him I was going to tell both his folks and mine the real story so they would leave us alone and we would be divorced. The next morning I found him dead in the garage from exhaust fume inhalation.

To this day I have told no one the true story. But there's a moral here. When people announce they are splitting up, family and friends should accept their decision and leave them alone. Why must they know all the details before they can approve a divorce? I'm having a hard time forgiving our parents for their well-intentioned counsel.

Thanks For Your Shoulder

Dear Thanks: Obviously you should have cut loose from both families and gone ahead with the divorce. The details are nobody's business. Your mistake was thinking you needed their approval.

Dear Ann Landers: I was pleased to read your advice to the young daughter not to tell her mother about her father's infidelity.

For several years I had a strong suspicion that my husband was having an affair with his secretary. His attitude toward me remained unchanged — generous, lovable and kind. He spent quite a lot of time with the family and I must say I never felt deprived. I decided to say nothing in the hope that the affair would die of natural causes.

Unhappily, our daughter learned of her father's unfaithfulness in a most unfortunate manner. She ran in to him and the woman in a quite, out-of-the-way restaurant late one night when he was supposed to be out of the city. She made a scene, called him a cheat and a liar — and proceeded to inform the rest of the family.

I suddenly became the "benefactor" of a great deal of unwanted advice. Everyone told me I was a fool to live with him. I became confused and upset and made the grave mistake of demanding a divorce. He did not want it but I insisted.

The result is that I am lonely and heartsick. My children have forgotten the incident and are busy with their families. And I note with interest that the daughter who started the trouble sees a great deal more of her father than she sees of me.

Keep telling people to mind their own business. My life would have been very different if well-meaning friends and relatives had kept their mouths shut.

Dunce Cap

Dear D.C.: There is no way to control other people's mouths, but that was only part of your downfall. You should have thanked the busybodies for their "kindness," ignored their counsel and handled the situation in the way that seemed best to you.

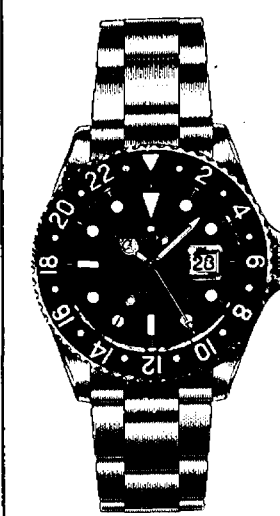

A no-nonsense approach to how to deal with life's most difficult and most rewarding arrangement. Ann Landers' booklet, "Marriage — What To Expect," will prepare you for better or for worse. Send your request to Ann Landers in care of your newspaper enclosing 50 cents in coin and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Academics' visit

Four before 'probe'

Hugh O'Brian is taping guest-star appearances this week on four TV shows — "The Goldiggers," "The Melba Moore Show," "It's Your Bet" and NBC-TV's "The Hollywood Squares" — prior to going into production June 1 for his starring role in NBC-TV's new fall series, "Probe."

Learned lesson

THE HARD WAY: (Comment) I wrote to you concerning the drug-using crowd I was in with. Well, I got your answer but I didn't listen to you, or my parents or the few "straight" friends I have.

Now I have just got out of the hospital recovering from an overdose of barbiturates. I realize the agony I put my parents through. I think I have finally learned that drugs are not the answer. I do know for sure that my family loves me.

Because of drugs I also lost my first "straight" boy friend. But he may see that I've changed and maybe he'll come back. (It was because of our break-up that I took an overdose)

I realize this letter is too long for your column, but if you could shorten it it might wake up a few people. I also want to thank you for trying to help me seven months ago.

Wiser in Connecticut

shortened it. But only words have been taken out. The strength is still there. Please keep walking the straight road.

TAPER: (Q.) My friend always asks me to bring my new records to her house. She tapes them all and buys none of her own. I hate to feel like a sucker, but what can I do?

Impatient in Pennsylvania

(A.) No friend is perfect. No friend acts in every instance just as you would have him or her act. You must weight the bad characteristics of a friend along with the good characteristics.

If your friend's hangup is records — and she does seem to have a hangup — makes you feel that she is using you, or involving you in something that is not right, then tell her exactly how you feel, or drop her.

WATER WORRY: (Q.) I've been wanting to write to you for a long time, but I felt ashamed. Well, here goes. It's swim suit time and most people say I am not bad looking, and I think I would have a good figure except for one thing.

You see, on my left side my waist doesn't curve in as far as on my right. I thought maybe trying to gain some weight might help, but I gained five pounds and it's still uneven. Do you think exercising would help?

One-Sided in New Jersey

(A.) Most people have differences of the kind you have — one breast smaller than the other, one foot longer, one ear sticking out farther. Exercise doesn't change such characteristics. It won't change your physical quirk.

Your answer is clothes that minimize the difference. A belted, one piece swim suit would help you.

New high in Georgia

ATLANTA (UPI) — Travel spending in Georgia hit a new high of about $1.2 billion in 1971, a 10 per cent increase over 1970, the tourist division of the State Department of Industry and Trade reports.

Of this amount, it is estimated that vacation-recreation travelers on Georgia highways spent $757.1 million and another $82.3 million was spent by tourists traveling by plane, train or bus, bringing total tourist spending to $839.4 million in 1971, also a 10 per cent boost over 1970.

Motivated youth

BRUNSWICK, Me. (UPI) — Add to proof of the excellence of contemporary youth: the most recent Dean's list at Bowdoin College in Maine contains the names of 512 students, more than half of those eligible.

Prof. Paul L. Nyhne, dean of students, said one of the factors in the record-size list of students making honors is the increasing opportunity being given Bowdoin students to design courses of study which develop their distinctive interests and talents. It adds up to strong motivation.

Mr. and Mrs. Ronald J. Meyer
(Arnold's Studio)

Meyer-Metzgar rites held at St. Luke's

STROUDSBURG — Miss Mary Elizabeth Metzgar, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert L. Metzgar of 450 White Birch Street, East Stroudsburg, became the bride of Ronald John Meyer, son of Mr. and Mrs. Jacques H. Meyer of R.D. 1, Stroudsburg, on June 3 at 1 p.m.

Rev. Francis Barrett celebrated the nuptial mass at Saint Luke's Church in Stroudsburg.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a white imported silk organza princess style gown featuring Venice lace trim with high neckline, long bishop sleeves, and chapel train. Matching Venice lace Juliet-type cap with imported French illusion veiling. She carried a crescent bouquet of white orchids, baby carnations and stephanotis.

Audrey Metzgar, sister of the bride, was maid of honor. Bridesmaids were Mrs. Maureen Tecau of Harrisburg and Mrs. Linda Cornell of Stroudsburg.

Just Between Us—

By Bobby Westbrook

With dispositions drying out along with the lawns, race track and golf courses, the coronation ball tonight promises to be a much gayer affair than seemed possible during the worst part of the rain.

In fact, getting dressed up after padding around in old shoes and raincoats, seeing other people after being housebound, and relaxing after the tension of the past ten days may be just what the doctor ordered.

People were enjoying seeing each other on the streets, too.

Altar, Rosary bake sales after masses

TANNERSVILLE — The Altar and Rosary Society of Our Lady of Victory Roman Catholic Church is holding bake sale after all masses this weekend at the church in Tannersville: Saturday at 5 and 7:30 p.m., and Sunday at 8, 9:30 and 11 a.m.

Members are asked to bring their homemade baked goods to the church basement.

The society will meet Wednesday, July 5 to plan for the annual bazaar in August.

At the June meeting a covered dish supper was held with the teachers at Pocono Central Catholic High School and Msgr. McHugh Memorial School, Cresco, members of the Sisters of the Immaculate Heart of Mary, as their guests.

especially when some of the people they were seeing were Bill and Sally Giles, now visiting his parents at Lake Wallenpaupack from their new church in Chicago. Their few errands threatened to take all day as they kept meeting members of his former congregation at the Stroudsburg Presbyterian Church.

The present flood on the Susquehanna brought up lots of local reminiscences about the other flood on the Delaware and its tributaries. Although I don't believe that rumor that people going up over the mountain after ten days of steady rain had seen a little old man building a boat up there, muttering "Only 30 more days to get ready".

There is nothing funny about a flood, of course, but on the other hand I'll admit to being shocked at the attitude of some people, deeming the severity of floods in Pennsylvania a punishment because the people of the state had voted for the lottery and Sunday liquor sales. Sort of heartless for the people didn't.

Haneys hosts to Faithful Workers class

HAMILTON SQUARE — Mr. and Mrs. Charles Haney entertained the Faithful Workers Class of Hamilton Union Sunday School at their home. A noontime meal in the form of a covered dish dinner was served to Mrs. Lydia Howter, Mrs. Lucy Rinker, Mrs. Ethel Rinker, Jo Ann Haney, Connie Haney and Cheryl Haney, who live near Williamsport and are visiting their grandparents.

Mrs. Lydia Howter presided at the meeting which followed the dinner. Illness accounted for the small attendance. Cheer cards were signed and sent to those who are ill. A thank you note was read from Mrs. Clara Serfass for the plant and cards she received in the hospital.

The president presented each member with a pamphlet of daily Bible readings. Each member also received a gift from the hostess and a prize was awarded Mrs. Ethel Rinker.

It was announced that Mrs. Lucy Rinker's son, Rev. Wilson Rinker, who lives in California, will be visiting the Holy Land in September.

'Green Survival' facts, figures

By GAIL NEVINS
STROUDSBURG — During the course of the 23,000 times we each inhale and exhale throughout a day, we take in 35 pounds of oxygen. Green plants on land and vegetation in the sea supply man with all of his oxygen — and in the process absorb huge quantities of carbon dioxide from the atmosphere.

Those statements are two of many facts to be found in a well done little booklet called "Green Survival and the Environmental Crisis," a position paper of the nursery industry concerning its national effort for environmental improvement.

The paper, created as a community service by the American Assn. of Nurserymen, Inc. (835 Southern Building, Washington, D.C. 20005), briefly outlines the story of the role of plants in the ecological battle.

The booklet was given out locally by LaBarr's Rhododendron Nursery at this year's Earth Fair. They may still have some left for those who are interested.

Beneath the telling pen and ink illustration on the cover is a statement of what the inside is about:

"This is a guide for positive, individual action in the environmental crisis. . . it is especially pertinent because pollution is a deadly personal matter."

"What a different place our nation would be if each citizen would, for instance, . . . plant trees to purify the air and trap dust. . . help create "greenbelts" to fight smog. . . plant green sound barriers to abate noise. . . install shrubs to stop erosion and help clean our rivers. . . and join with others to create micro-environments to feed the spirit of man."

Noting that the environment is both comprehensive and complex, horticulture has gone beyond the demands of aesthetics. Improvement of human environment is a goal of environmental horticulture. Horticulture research explores every avenue through which the condition of man's environment can be improved by use of plant material: purification of air; noise abatement; soil stabilization and water clarification.

Trees, it tells us, help cool the air through transpiration, evaporation and shade in the summer. In winter they reduce wind velocity and protect buildings from heat loss. Trees absorb polluted air and release air richer in oxygen

Sex education: Facts in school, morals at home

By JUDITH GELBER

The content of sex education classes in the public schools is controversial because such sensitive topics as premarital sex, birth control, abortion, venereal disease and the like are included. And there is conflict between the need to provide objective and factual information, and the desire to curb immature behavior with lectures on moral restraint.

Many parents would probably be surprised by the sometimes extensive knowledge their children have of the basics of sex. It shocks them, therefore, to think that topics that are often taboo in the home are discussed freely and openly in the classroom. Adults also have a tendency to think that the more students learn about sexual needs and desires, the more they will want to find out for themselves.

But one of the fundamental purposes of sex education is to acquaint young people not with a blueprint for action, which most of them already possess, but with the inevitable consequences of their actions. It is therefore unrealistic and self-defeating to limit discussions on sex to embarrassed exhortations by the teacher to remain "pure" until the marriage vows are spoken.

However, even though the need to include as much information as possible in class discussions is recognized, it is still difficult to reconcile the factual approach with the often restrictive social values that govern our daily lives.

For example, discussions on the various methods of birth control can be handled quite objectively, and without embarrassment, by specially-trained personnel, particularly from the medical profession. But the question inevitably arises about the availability of these devices to those who want them, whether or not they are married.

The question can be treated without any attempt to bring in the moral issue of whether it is "right" or "wrong" for unmarried people to obtain these devices by pointing out that the use the individual makes for the "facts" is a purely private matter between that individual and his or her conscience.

Others, however, may feel that emotionally immature youngsters need a strong dose of moral strictures about chastity to keep the young from regarding the availability of birth-control devices as a license to indulge without fear of the consequences.

The same problem exists regarding abortion with varying degrees of disgust, if not with dismay. Statisticians, however, point out that abortions will take place, whether or not society approves; therefore, it is better to have them done by competent physicians rather than by unscrupulous butchers.

The issue between providing fact or moral backbone, however, can be resolved if parents don't regard sex education classes as yet another excuse to avoid responsibility. The schools can do their part in providing the factual information. But it is up to the parents to provide the moral foundations that will help our children avoid the pitfalls of promiscuity.

The bidding:

Opening lead — ten of diamonds.
 You don't actually see declarer's cards when you are a defender, but it is frequently possible to visualize them with the same effort as if you were looking right at his hand.

Sometimes you can deduce the nature of his hand from the bidding, and sometimes from the play, but more often than not you discover what declarer has only by studying both of them.

Take this case where East had to make a crucial decision at trick one. West led the ten of diamonds, on which dummy played the jack, and straight away East had to decide whether the diamond lead was a singleton or a doubleton.

 If he decided it was a singleton, he would have to win with the ace and return a diamond for West to ruff. In the actual case, had East done this, South would have made the contract very easily — his only losers would have been a heart, a diamond and a club.
 But East put on his thinking cap and concluded that the lead was a doubleton. Accordingly, he signaled with the seven, and when West later took the lead with a trump he returned a diamond to East's ace and got a ruff to put the contract down one.

East knew from the bidding that declarer had four spades and four hearts. (North's two club bid was Stayman, requesting partner to bid a four-card major if he had one.) It followed that South could not have four diamonds, for that would place him with a singleton club and he would not have opened the bidding with a no-trump in such case.

West's lead therefore had to be a doubleton, and the only chance of stopping the contract consequently was to play on the basis that West could eventually get a diamond ruff.

Moth spraying program over

STROUDSBURG — Officials of the Pennsylvania Department of Environmental Resources, Bureau of Forestry, have completed a governmental spraying program designed to control the gypsy moth.

A total of 23,257 acres in Pike, Monroe, Carbon, Luzerne and Schuylkill Counties have been treated during the program, which was funded jointly by the Federal, State and local governments, each paying one-third of the cost.

Areas sprayed during the program were listed on a priority basis based on seriously affected areas in 1971. Areas selected for treatment were forested communities, camps, recreation areas and similar high area uses.

The officials also said that individual property owners may also elect to treat their own properties. Owners are advised, when hiring a commercial applicator to do the spraying, to know what substance he intends to spray, how much it will cost and if he is fully insured.

A light infestation of caterpillars can be controlled by mechanical means, when a small number of trees are involved. A skirt of burlap or heavy paper can be loosely tied around the trunk of the tree at a convenient height. The caterpillars will come down from the tree during the day to rest in the shade. They will collect under the burlap or paper and can easily be killed by squashing them or flipping them into a can of kerosene or gasoline.

THINK SAFETY

Easter Seal Society

Easter Seal bumper sticker

Easter Seal unit stresses safety

STROUDSBURG — It's been a cold, wet spring for most Americans. July 4 — hopefully a fair weather major holiday — will bring hundreds of thousands of families onto the roads for a weekend out of doors and into one of the worst traffic situations in history.

Sometimes a simple graphic reminder can turn the trick in avoiding a tragic accident. That's why the National Easter Seal Society has created a "Think Safety" bumper sticker as a cautionary note in helping to stem the tide of 4th of July traffic accidents. The bumper sticker can be obtained from your local Easter Seal Society.

In a further attempt to help reduce accidents, the society offers the following traffic tips to all those planning July 4 outings.

—Never drive when you are tired. If necessary, pull off the road and get enough rest to continue safely.

—Provide diversions for children. A simple game or coloring book can prevent accidents caused by a parent turning from the road to quell the squabbles of bored children.

—Enjoy the scenery, but not while driving. Pull off at rest stops and enjoy your surroundings from the road side.

—Use seat belts and-or harnesses.

—Drive courteously and cautiously.

Traffic accidents are only one safety hazard you'll face over the holiday weekend. Picnics and camping areas offer additional dangers to your family. Once you have arrived at your destination, keep the following advice from the Easter Seal Society in mind.

—When starting fires, keep children well out of the range of flames and sparks.

—Never have gasoline or other combustibles in the vicinity of a fire.

—Be certain that your child's clothing is inflammable.

Never allow children to explore unfamiliar camp grounds alone. Instead, enjoy a family nature expedition.

—Explore all unfamiliar terrain slowly. Serious injury can result from trips on rocks, tree stumps and other obstacles.

—Be sure the whole family is wearing sturdy shoes with heavy soles to prevent cuts and foot injuries.

—Carry a first aid kit and know how to use it. Small cuts and bruises can grow into serious infections if not cared for.

Most safety rules are common sense — a little caution and an awareness of potential dangers can go a long way in preventing accidents. Help make your holiday weekend a safe one by asking your local Easter Seal Society for a "Think Safety" bumper sticker.

Don't mess around with fireworks July 4

JIM THORPE — A few moments of fun may be quickly turned into years of regret. Loss of sight is always present when someone fools around with fireworks during the July 4 holiday period.

The Carbon-Monroe Branch, Pennsylvania Assn. for the Blind, knows much about the tragic incidents of disfiguring burns, eye injuries and blindness resulting from what was thought to be harmless fun with fireworks.

Sparklers, for instance, burn at 1650 degrees Fahrenheit, leaving a steel core hot enough to sear flesh and set clothing ablaze. Yet, every year, indulgent adults scoff at these dangers and purchase fireworks illegally so their kids will have a "great" Fourth of July.

According to the Pennsylvania Fireworks Law, the sale of fireworks containing any explosive or flammable compound, tablets, torpedoes, sky-rockets, Roman Candles, sparklers, cherry bombs and other fireworks of the like construction pose a serious threat to eyesight. The sale and use of fireworks can result in punishment by fine, imprisonment or both.

The Assn. is concerned with the eye safety of all children and urges all residents to obey the law.

African elephant debuts at Pocono Animal Farm

STROUDSBURG — There will be a heavy scene at the Pocono Wild Animal Farm today when Mito, a baby African bush elephant makes her debut.

Mito (meaning baby) is only two years old, but already she is four feet tall and weighs 500 pounds.

She belongs to the largest breed of elephant there is, according to manager Bill Gusset, and will reach a height of eight feet and a weight of seven or eight tons when she is full grown.

She eats half a bale of hay, 12 quarts of grain and any carrots, bananas or apples she can get. She also gets a bath every morning and will need her toenails cut occasionally.

Mito will be on display in her own little yard surrounded by a palisade of logs. A mound on one side of the palisade will allow her to see the visitors and a platform on the other side will allow visitors to feed her.

She came over to this country with a boatload of elephants bound for other zoos. Mito is timid now, but she has to be trained so she will not become unruly, Gusset said. Right now she seems very contented and will probably delight visitors for years to come since these elephants often live 60 years or more.

Col. Cheney cites changes as top achievements

By JOE DeVIVO
Pocono Record Reporter

TOBYHANNA — Col. Robert A. Cheney, commanding officer at Tobyhanna Army Depot, cited his "encouragement of management innovations" as one of the outstanding achievements accomplished during his tenure.

Col. Cheney is one of 62 colonels recently nominated by the President to the rank of brigadier general and will leave the depot July 17. He will be reassigned to the Procurement and Production Directorate, Headquarters, the U.S. Army Electronics Command, in Ft. Monmouth, N.J.

Since his assignment to Tobyhanna in 1970, Cheney believes "significant progress" has taken place at the depot. The colonel is proud of the many management innovations that have been instituted, such as the use of cost-control methods in maintenance, a new computer system, modernized warehousing, and operations research.

Another highlight at Tobyhanna during Cheney's tenure occurred last November when the depot played host to the AMC Commander's Conference. Many of the top-ranking logistics officers in the nation attended the conference.

Cheney called the command of the 3,400 people employed at the depot "one of my most challenging positions." He noted that although "any command assignment is a gratifying experience," the opportunity to command Tobyhanna offered a "tremendous management challenge."

Cheney had only been on the grade of full colonel for 17 months when he was nominated to the promotion list, but noted he held only the rank of lieutenant colonel when he assumed command of Tobyhanna in June, 1970. "Quite a few people were shocked that the post was given to a junior officer," Cheney remarked.

Cheney noted there is currently a new trend to promote younger officers, led by Army Secretary Robert F. Froehke. Froehke recently warned the selection board to "beware of men who are too concerned with success" and favors the Army promoting "men who are young in outlook, both mentally and physically."

The reason for bringing in younger officers, said Cheney, is to develop more communications between officers and enlisted men. "It's tough getting a link with youth," he remarked.

The colonel feels an all-volunteer army can be a success, although "a number of years would be needed to establish a satisfactory force." "The Army can no longer think of itself in just a national security standpoint," continued Cheney, but must be able to provide "meaningful job assignments" for people.

An example of the depot's attempts to move in this direction is the current move to acquire a company of troops for full-time use at Tobyhanna. A company of this type, explained Cheney, would "assist and encourage people to join a volunteer army by providing them with an excellent place to live, work, and be trained."

Soil district studies creating new position

STROUDSBURG — The Monroe County Soil and Water Conservation District considered a proposal to create the position of executive assistant Wednesday night, but tabled any action until the members have time to consider the plan in more detail.

The executive assistant would be a natural resource manager who provides guidance and assistance to the district, county commissioners, schools, and businessmen. Lehigh County is currently hiring for such a position.

The creation of the position would help relieve some of the duties presently done by the district conservationist. Several district members cited the need to first draw up a definite job description before screening any applicants or creating the position.

In other action, the district agreed to draft a letter to the other districts in the counties of Carbon, Wayne, Pike, Luzerne and Lackawanna to find out their feelings on a cooperative resource, conservation and development project. The Monroe district has already agreed to consider such a project, but funds are more readily available to joint conservation projects.

The district also agreed to update a list of county-wide organizations that are conservation minded and submit that list to the county commissioners for approval.

Spending increased 30 per cent

Board adopts $2.6 million budget

By CONRAD GROVE
Pocono Record Reporter

NAZARETH — Colonial Northampton Intermediate Unit 20 directors unanimously approved a $2,648,274 special education budget Wednesday night for Monroe, Pike and Northampton county school districts.

The budget — 30 per cent higher than this year's — is based on Pennsylvania's "Right to Education" mandate for mentally retarded youngsters.

The act requires school districts to provide services for such students and won the backing of a federal court in early May.

Unit 20 falls in line with other intermediate units across the state in the hike. Budgets submitted to date average 33 per cent more, reports the Bureau of Special Education.

70 to enter classes
Some 70 students in Unit 20's 13 school districts may enter classes through the decision, said Leland Cramer, assistant executive director. Before the act, school districts could refuse mentally retarded youngsters aged six to eight and 17 to 21.

Classes may be bulked up next year, with plans made for two additional classes for elementary mentally retarded, six for trainable mentally retarded and two for brain-injured students.

The budget will be examined by the Bureau of Special Education in December. Should the classes not be needed, adjustments will be made.

In addition, the budget provides for five more classes for the emotionally disturbed, one class for physically handicapped and one for hard of hearing, and four therapists.

Two additional psychologists will probably be employed, as well as a director of special education and a business manager.

Estimated expenditures for next year (with the 1971-72 year in parenthesis) show:

P.M. board to take action on delinquent taxes

SWIFTWATER — Delinquent tax accounts came under lengthy discussion by Pocono Mountain School Board members Wednesday night when Solicitor Alex Bensinger advised directors that there are legal means by which they could collect these taxes.

"If a person hasn't paid this tax yet or if he had previously been exonerated and is now found to be liable for payment, there are definite ways we can collect these monies," said Bensinger, using "we" to indicate the Pocono Mountain School District.

"I think the lists should be reviewed and we should determine the number of people falling into these areas," said Bensinger, with a suggestion that the board involve itself directly in the collection of these taxes, possibly through court action.

Bensinger also pointed out, with an assist from Dr. Anthony Boly, that people who have never been listed on the tax rolls are also delinquent, since they are responsible for their names being on that list.

The school board then authorized the solicitor to prepare a draft of a resolution preliminary to drafting of a resolution.

The board also went on record as having requested Pennsylvania Power and Light Co. to give the board $100 each for rights to construct two poles on the grounds of Tobyhanna Elementary Center. P.P. & L. had offered a nominal fee of one dollar for the right-of-way.

The board also acted on four personnel changes. The board accepted the resignation of Geraldine Cramer, office staff; granted leaves of absence to Katherine Kitchen, elementary teacher, for travel and Mrs. Cheryl Klaus, maternity leave; and appointed Mrs. Barbara Lord, Swiftwater, and Mrs. Frederica M. Kaltenthaler, Pocono Pines, to the elementary and kindergarten staffs, respectively.

In other action, the board: —Accepted all accounts of the district tax collections involving taxable townships.

—Decided to advertise for bids for the replacement of a heating coil in one of Pocono Mountain High School's oil tanks.

—Referred all legitimate bids on equipment to the administration for tabulation and recommendation before awarding of bids is announced.

—Sent a letter of gratitude to Paradise Township officials concerning their work in patching and maintaining the Pocono Mountain High School parking and road areas.

MHMR shapes $112,000 plan

Alcohol-drug treatment set

By GARY GROSSMAN
Pocono Record Reporter

STROUDSBURG — A $112,000 structured program for treatment of alcoholics and drug abusers is being shaped by the Carbon-Monroe-Pike Mental Health Retardation agency based in Stroudsburg.

A spokesman for the agency said Wednesday the program has been approved and is awaiting funding.

From its inception in 1969, the Community Mental Health Center has accepted all cases of mental disability, including problems related to drug and alcohol abuse.

The plan being implemented now would concentrate efforts in the direction of alcoholism and drug abuse.

It means adding a whole new department to the MHMR agency headed by a medical coordinator and staffed by a vocational counselor, two caseworkers, a part-time pharmacist and a part-time nurse.

Services to be provided alcoholics and drug users include emergency treatment, inpatient, outpatient, partial hospitalization and eventually group living services for the patients.

The plan submitted for state approval divides the program into categories, describing the planned services to alcoholics and the same for drug abusers.

It states a "conservative estimate" of the patients seen in the program since it was founded four years ago would find four of every 10 involved with alcohol or drugs.

Alcoholics were found to average around 42-years-old, many having school age children and problems performing their jobs.

The average age of the drug abuser is put at 20, but both groups displayed a loss of contact with their church, social affiliates and family, according to the report.

Known alcoholics in Monroe County may be cycled into a pattern of weekend drying out in the local lock-up and little else. The new program offers a chance to participate in an active treatment program which could permanently dry out the alcoholic.

Following evaluation of a patient referred to the program, the alcoholic will probably be placed in a group of six to eight patients for group therapy.

In these sessions the patient will be expressing himself to other patients without being judged. Therapists and other staff members believe they will get a picture of the alcoholic's needs from the sessions.

Individual therapy will follow, including programs for occupational and recreational therapy.

Ultimately, the MHMR personnel hope to return alcoholics to society with the ability to hold a job and family free of dependence on alcohol.

For addicts and drug abusers, similar treatment is proposed in the plan.

In response to an increasingly severe drug problem in the area, MHMR began a methadone maintenance program almost a year ago.

Methadone is an addictive drug with the ability to block the effects of heroin and other opiate narcotics without the euphoria associated with narcotic abuse.

Currently 17 persons in Monroe County pick up their dose of methadone every day. The program is conducted under supervision and in conformance with nationally established standards.

In the next two months the program will be placed under a full time staff and a slightly changed set of guidelines.

Hospitalization for drug users on a bad trip will be made available and the program will lean heavily on consultation and education in the drug abuse area.

Gas station construction approved

MINISINK HILLS — The Smithfield Township Planning Commission Wednesday approved construction plans of the Humble Oil and Refining Company for a gas station to be located on Route 209 across from the Holiday Inn.

John Dennis, commission engineer, said the submitted plan complies with all township zoning ordinances except for sewage and highway occupancy permits. He pointed out the state has jurisdiction in these two areas since the plan is for a commercial construction.

In other business, the commission reviewed land transfers for the month of May to see if they conformed to the township subdivision ordinance. A total of seven transfers were recorded as violating the ordinance for selling land without notifying the Planning Commission.

It was decided a letter would be sent to both buyer and seller to inform them of the violation in order to allow them time to comply.

The commission also accepted a preliminary plot plan from Raymond Roberts.

Marshall doubles Mets to 3-2 win over Phillies

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — Dave Marshall banged out a pair of doubles Wednesday night to lead the New York Mets to a 3-2 victory over the Philadelphia Phillies as Tom Seaver won his 10th game of the season.

Marshall doubled home New York's first run in the fourth and set up the decisive run in the eighth when he opened the inning with a double off loser Gary Neibauer, (0-1).

Marshall took third as Jim Fregosi grounded out and scored the Mets third run when pinch hitter Jim Beauchamp hit a sacrifice fly off reliever Woody Fryman.

Seaver (10-4) survived a shaky start as Philadelphia

Brock sparkles in Cards win

ST. LOUIS (UPI)—Lou Brock had two hits, scored one run, drove in another and stole a base Wednesday night to lead the St. Louis Cardinals to an 8-4 victory over the Chicago Cubs.

Reggie Cleveland, winning his eighth game, tops on the St. Louis pitching staff, allowed eight hits. His record is now 8-4, including 6-1 at Busch Stadium.

Brock led off the game for the Cardinals with a single and stole second. He scored on Joe Torre's single. Ted Simmons also singled, and Jose Cruz doubled home Torre Simmons then scored the third St. Louis run of the first inning when the throw by Chicago rightfielder Jose Cardenal hit Cruz.

Brock doubled home Dal Maxvill in the second after Maxvill reached base on Ron Santo's fielding error and went to second on Cleveland's sacrifice. The Cards added a run in the fifth on Ed Crosby's single, a wild pitch by reliever Dan McGinn and a double by Matty Alou. Simmons homered in the seventh with Torre on base with a single.

Loser Bill Hands (6-4), who has beaten the Cards twice previously in two starts this season, left the game after Brock's double in the second.

Brock has a 14-game hitting streak and has hit safely 25 of his last 26 games.

Jim Hickman hit a three-run homer for Chicago in the eighth to drive in Don Kessinger, who walked, and Billy Williams, who singled. The other Chicago run came in the seventh on singles by Rick Monday and Cardenal and a double play.

Aaron clout lifts Braves over Padres

SAN DIEGO (UPI)—Hank Aaron hit a two-run homer in the top of the ninth inning to break a 2-2 deadlock and give Atlanta a 4-2 win over San Diego Wednesday night in the first game of a doubleheader.

Aaron's homer, his 14th of the year, was the 633rd of his career, and the two runs batted in gave him a career total of 1,092, moving him into second place on the lifetime RBI list. He had been tied with former N.Y. Yankee great Lou Gehrig. Aaron's homer came off Padres loser Mike Corkins.

'He's ducking me'

Ali: 'I want Frazier'

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (UPI)—Muhammad Ali wasted no time Wednesday going into the chant "I want Frazier—he's ducking me" following his seventh round technical knockout of Jerry Quarry Tuesday night.

Ali appeared at a post fight news conference at Caesar's Palace along with light heavyweight champion Bob Foster who flattened Quarry's younger brother, Mike, with a left hook in the fourth round of their scheduled 15-round bout.

The $500,000 richer former Cassius Clay turned his filibuster talents to the future with a diatribe against heavyweight champion Joe Fraizer who won a 15 round decision on March 8, 1971, in New York.

"I want Frazier—he's ducking me," Ali declaimed. "I'm the real champion. I'm the big draw. I'm the resurrector of the sport. They gave Frazier a crown too heavy to wear."

"Why don't you guys (the sportswriters) get him off the farm. Tell him 'the last time I beat you (Ali's interpretation of the result) you had to rest for a month. This time you are going to have to rest for two months.'"

Foster could scarcely get a word in edgewise although actually his performance was more impressive than Ali's and it appeared he might meet Muhammad before Frazier agrees to defend his title.

Ali acknowledges that Foster might be on the horizon. He said his next fight would be in Dublin, Ireland, July 19 against Alvin "Blue" Lewis of Detroit who has a 31-4 record. After that he said he might fight Floyd Patterson again, possibly in New York.

Then he turned to Foster and said, "You can get in the act, too, if you want—sooner or later."

Foster needed Ali about the fact his fight went only four rounds while Muhammad took seven.

Virtual tie with Mets

Pirates downed, 3-1

PITTSBURGH (UPI)—Bill Stoneman tossed an eight-inning and Ron Fairly's first inning triple ignited a two-run rally Wednesday night as the Montreal Expos defeated Pittsburgh 3-1, knocking the Pirates into a virtual tie with the New York Mets for first place in the National League East.

It was Stoneman's seventh win in 12 decisions while Steve Blass—after winning eight straight—lost his second game against nine victories.

The Expos scored twice in the first inning after the first two men were retired. Ron Hunt walked and scored when Fairly lined a triple to center, the ball getting by Al Oliver who attempted a shoe-string catch. Boots Day's single then scored Fairly.

Montreal made it 3-0 in the fourth when Jim Fairley doubled, took third on a fly out and scored when Blass uncorked a wild pitch.

The Pirates averted a shutout in the eighth when Dave Cash doubled with one out and scored on Vic Davallillo's single. Stoneman then got Oliver—who earlier had tripled and singled—on a pop-up and struck out Willie Stargell.

Advances to second round

Chris Evert beats nerves, foe

WIMBLEDON, England (UPI)—Chris Evert's debut at the $130,858 Wimbledon lawn tennis championships Wednesday was not all she hoped for, but she overcame her stage fright and lived to fight another day.

Miss Evert, the 17-year-old fourth seed from Ft. Lauderdale, Fla., battled for 1 hour 10 minutes before beating Valerie Ziegenfuss of San Diego, Calif., 1-6, 6-3, 6-3 to advance to the second round.

Twins eke by Angels

BLOOMINGTON, Minn. (UPI)—Cesar Tovar's eighth inning run-producing single gave the Minnesota Twins a 7-8 victory over the California Angels Wednesday.

Pinchhitter Charlie Manuel opened the Twins' eighth with a single. Pinchrunner Danny Monzon advanced to second on a throwing error by Angel pitcher Tom Dukes, and then moved to third on Steve Braun's single. Monzon then scored the winning run on Tovar's infield single.

Afterwards she admitted to nerves. "I only got hold of myself in the third set," she said.

Despite her nervous beginning, she won the hearts of the 9,000 crowd inside the No. 1 court by her refusal to crack when things were at their blackest. Her court manners were impeccable, even when doubtful calls went against her.

Miss Evert was always under pressure because of a soft second service but she scrambled everything from the baseline and on the rare occasion she ventured to the net she punched home winners.

Miss Ziegenfuss started to slide when she dropped her opening service in the second set by serving two double faults. She broke back in the fourth game, but was broken at 30 in the ninth.

In the deciding set, there were four successive service breaks from 1-1 before Miss Evert got ahead in the eighth. In the next game she raced to 40-15 and needed only one of her match points, finishing things off with a perfect lob which caught the baseline chalk.

Afterwards the budding champion, who still has to taste defeat in England, said: "It was like being on a cloud with all those people out there. Everyone says Wimbledon is something special and now I know what they mean."

Miss Evert, who meets Janet Newbury of La Jolla, Calif., in the next round, said: "Now that the first match is out of the way, I think I can settle down to play my normal game."

While Miss Evert was having moments of self doubt, three-time champion Billie Jean King of Long Beach, Calif., the second seed but bookies favorite at 11-8, needed only 30 minutes to register a 6-2, 6-0 win over Sharon Walsh of San Raphael, Calif. Billie was devastating in her economy and brought gasps of amazement from the capacity Center Court crowd of 15,000 who marvelled at the full range of Mrs. King's strokes.

fireworks on Center Court between second seeded Lie Nastase of Romania and New York's Clark Graebner were disappointed. What they did witness was the two men walking off court with the arms around each other after Nastase had scored a comfortable 6-3, 4-6, 6-1, 6-2 win.

Last time they met, at London's Royal Albert Hall in January, Nastase walked out of their semifinal at the Rothmans tournament when Graebner, upset at the Romanian's gamesmanship, jumped the net and waved his fist in his opponent's face.

In the only upset of the day, which took 12 minutes to complete, New Zealand's Onny Parun completed the destruction of fourth seeded Andres Gimeno of Spain, 6-4, 8-6, 6-8, 9-6, 4.

They resumed at 3-3 in the fifth and the Kiwi broke in the 10th game after Gimeno had stood 40-15.

Bench leads Reds to win over Giants; hikes RBI lead

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)—Catcher Johnny Bench increased his major league lead in RBIs to 58 by driving in two scores Wednesday to lead the Cincinnati Reds to 4-2 victory over the San Francisco Giants.

Bench belted a double and single as the powerful Reds collected seven extra base hits in beating the Giants. Tony Perez had a homer and two doubles while Bobby Tolan rapped a pair of doubles for the Reds.

Cincinnati scored single runs in each of the first four innings, and scoreless relief pitching by Pedro Borbon and Tom Hall preserved the victory for starter Ross Grimsley. Grimsley picked up his third win.

The loser was Don Carrithers who gave up the first three Cincinnati runs. The Reds scored another run off relief pitcher Frank Reberger in the fourth inning on back-to-back doubles by Tolan and Bench.

The Giants scored their runs in the third inning on a walk to Jim Howarth and homer by Chris Speier. It was Speier's eighth home run of the season—equalling his 1971 roundtrip output.

The loss snapped a four-game victory string for the Giants. It was the Reds' fourth straight win.

Homers carry White Sox, 6-4

CHICAGO (UPI)—The Chicago White Sox scored four runs on home runs by Dick Allen, Walt Williams and Tom Egan and broke a tie with Carlos May's two run single Wednesday to beat the Oakland Athletics, 6-4.

Vide Blue, who started for the A's, was the victim of the three homers. Allen hit a bases empty blow in the first inning. Williams led off the third with his first homer of the year, and Egan homered with May on base in the fourth. Blue was removed for Joe Horlen in the sixth after one out and was not involved in the decision.

The A's tied the score at 4-4 in the seventh. Tim Cullen had doubled home Mike Epstein for a run in the second inning and Joe Rudi sprinted home from third base on Dave Lemond's wild pitch in the third.

Bert Campaneris led off the A's fifth, with a double, moved to third on Rudi's sacrifice bunt and scored on Sal Bando's sacrifice fly. The fourth run came in the seventh when Bando singled after Campaneris' second double of the game.

Terry Foster got the win. The loss went to Bob Locker.

Melvin Laird: Foresight his forte throughout career

WASHINGTON (UPI) — It was early in the basketball season and the hometown team wasn't doing too well. But one youth from Marshfield, Wis., telephoned a hotel in Madison, the state capital, and made an advance reservation for the state high school basketball tournament.

When the team did make the finals, young Melvin R. Laird was one of the few from Marshfield who had a place to sleep in Madison.

"He rented out space on the floor of his room," recalls Robert F. Froehke, then Laird's school chum and now secretary of the Army. "He made some money. He made friends. And he had a bed to sleep in."

"He has foresight." Foresight is one of the qualities that have marked Laird's career — first as Wisconsin's youngest state senator in 1946 at the age of 23, then during 16 years in the U.S. Congress beginning in 1952, and now as secretary of Defense, a job he took on in 1968.

It is also one of the qualities which led to Laird's angry clash recently with Sen. J. William Fulbright, D-Ark., during a Senate Foreign Relations Committee hearing on the Moscow strategic arms limitation agreements.

Laird told Fulbright the new arms agreements were inseparable from funding for a new bomber, a new missile-firing submarine and an anti-ballistic missile system to protect Washington. To approve the agreements without voting funds for the new weapons, he said, would undermine U.S. security.

Fulbright lashed back, charging Laird with "spreading misinformation" about the nature of the Soviet threat and with undermining U.S. security himself by using the agreements to start a new round of the arms race.

Laird denied these charges. He ended the exchange, his most heated public liff with Congress since he took the Pentagon job, by telling Fulbright, "I think you have gone far beyond the position it is proper for any member of Congress to take."

A sharp temper is another of Laird's traits, and aides said it was Fulbright's charge of "misinformation" that really set the defense secretary off. But they said it is a deep knowledge of political as well as military realities that makes Laird insist the arms accord and the new weapons must be approved hand-in-hand.

"If they were separated," one aide said, "he knows the weapons funding would not stand a chance. And giving up those (weapons) programs would let the Soviet Union get ahead of us in vital areas that would weaken our position in the second round of the arms limitation talks."

Early last week there were those who said Laird's position lacked White House backing.

Certainly some on the White House staff did give this impression. Henry Kissinger, President Nixon's national security adviser, said the arms accord and the weapons request should be considered separately on their merits. And after the exchange with Fulbright, a White House spokesman said Laird was expressing a personal opinion.

But next day, Nixon came out in strong support of Laird, saying approval of the agreements without the new weapons would "seriously" damage U.S. security and that chances of a permanent, more comprehensive arms limitation agreement would be "totally destroyed."

"That should be a lesson," one top defense aide said afterward. "Laird may not always have the backing of the White House staff, but he rarely acts without knowing the President backs him fully."

Laird was a reluctant secretary of defense. He took the job only in the 11th hour, at President-elect Nixon's urging, after Nixon's first choice for the job, Sen. Henry M. Jackson, D-Wash., turned it down. Laird was the first professional politician to be named defense secretary.

His political instincts remain strong. Laird will go to Capitol Hill at the slightest excuse — even to get his sparse, short hair cut — and his relations with Congress have been much smoother than those of Robert S. McNamara. He is a political pro, and proud of it.

Political training began early in Laird's life. Born Sept. 1, 1922, he began campaigning for his father, a Presbyterian minister and Wisconsin state senator, even before he was old enough to vote.

Laird comes from a sparsely populated district in Wisconsin, a "safe" and conservative Republican district. During his 16 years in Congress he had three prime interests — health and education, defense and the strengthening of the Republican Party. He became the most powerful Republican in the House of Representatives.

Associates in Congress and at the Pentagon know him as a hard worker, a man who does his homework, a man who is fast on his feet. He has been called steely, shrewd, a politician who almost never acts until he counts the votes — and an extremely complex individual, a man of paradox.

A hawk at heart, he became disenchanted with the Vietnam war in 1967. In the past couple of years he has pushed Nixon for even faster U.S. withdrawal from Vietnam, and unsuccessfully opposed the use of American troops in the 1970 Cambodian incursion.

Although he wrote a book in 1962 advocating U.S. first-strike nuclear capability and saying nuclear war would be inevitable if the Soviet Union achieved strategic parity with the United States, he has become the chief architect of a defense strategy leading to a future balance in nuclear weapons.

And although he believes in strong civilian control over the military, he has given the generals far more say in defense matters than did McNamara.

Aides say Laird is the kind of man who would rather talk to people than read memos, who would rather walk down the hall to find an assistant than call the man to his office, who does not object to being called at any hour of the night at home — and often is.

The defense secretary's job begins about 6:30 a.m., when his chauffeured limousine picks him up for the half-hour drive from his $75,000 Maryland home to the Pentagon. He leaves work about 7 p.m., usually with a stack of night reading.

During the day he smokes three long, thin cigars — one after each meal — and an occasional cigarette.

And he longs for the day, now close at hand, when he can leave the Pentagon and the constant requirement that he be within telephone's reach of the President and the Pentagon War Room.

"That," said a close friend, "is the thing that grates with him most. It would with any man who is, at heart, a free spirit."

Laird has said he will leave the Defense Department at the end of Nixon's first term. He has refused to talk about his future beyond that point, but many friends believe his eyes are on the Presidential elections of 1976.

McGovern-Kennedy strongest Nixon foe

By LOUIS HARRIS

Sen. Edward Kennedy runs a stronger race against President Nixon — at least as of now — than Sen. George McGovern, because the Massachusetts Democrat has much more drawing power with the so-called traditional Democratic "gut" vote: Catholics, union members, blacks, and persons with incomes of $5,000-$10,000.

By the same token, McGovern is relatively stronger among those groups where Kennedy has consistently run poorly: independents and the college educated. Both Kennedy and McGovern run far ahead among the under-30 vote.

Sen. Kennedy has said that if the only way the Democrats might have a chance to win were for him to run for Vice President with Sen. McGovern, he would not rule out that possibility. There is no doubt that the patterns of appeal of the two men are vastly different and, by and large, complementary.

In fact, if the showing from the latest Harris Survey of Senators Kennedy and McGovern are combined, taking the South Dakota's votes among the college educated and independents and adding to them Kennedy's votes among Catholics, union members, blacks, and lower middle-income voters, then the Democrats would be much closer in the poll standings than is the case today:

McGOVERN-KENNEDY VS. NIXON

	McGovern Alone Per cent	Kennedy Alone Per cent	McGovern- Kennedy Combined
Three-way Race
Nixon	45	43	41
Democrat	33	37	39
Wallace	17	16	16
Not sure	5	4	4
Two-way Race
Nixon	54	53	51
Democrat	38	41	43
Not sure	8	6	6

In a three-way contest with George Wallace on a third-party line, a McGovern-Kennedy ticket could hypothetically reduce the Nixon 6-point lead over Kennedy to a narrow 2-point edge. In a two-way race, with Wallace not running, the current Nixon 12-point lead would be cut to eight points. Of course, the risk in any such hypothetical combination is that with Kennedy on the ticket, McGovern might not run as well with the so-called "gut" vote while losing strength among the more independent, affluent and better-educated voters.

In the case of a McGovern-Kennedy ticket in a three-way race they would end up 17 points behind and in a two-way race an overwhelming 21 points behind.

The differences between the Kennedy and McGovern vote patterns highlight the crossroad decision between the old politics and the new that the Democratic party faces at its convention.

Both McGovern and Kennedy have a substantial hold on the allegiance of those voters under 30 years of age:

McGOVERN AND KENNEDY APPEAL AMONG VOTERS UNDER 30

Democrat	52	53
Wallace	11	11
Not Sure	3	3
Two-way Race
Nixon	41	40
Democrat	55	57
Not Sure	4	3

But Kennedy does substantially better than McGovern among both Catholic and union families:

Motel growth

NEW YORK (UPI) — There were 7,430 motor hotels with 803,734 units in the United States at the end of 1971, compared with 6,990 properties with 742,307 units in 1970 and 4,542 properties with 430,679 units in 1965, according to a survey by Helmsley-Spear, Inc. The increase represents a net gain over the seven years of 87 per cent in rooms and 64 per cent in motor hotels.

L.A. area mostly man-made

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — As if the mountains, climate, ocean and desert were not enough, the greater Los Angeles area has more man-made tourist attractions than almost all other American cities combined.

The place has virtually become Vacationland, U.S.A.

It all begins with Disneyland, the most popular tourist attraction — including the great relics of history abroad — in the world. This year the magic kingdom has added new attractions for those repeat customers who return year after year.

Roughly in the same area, within less than five miles of Disneyland, are the Japanese Village, Knott's Berry Farm, and the Movieland Wax Museum.

Out of state visitors could spend a week at this complex of pleasure and entertainment without really seeing it all.

The Japanese Village is a beguiling version of an old country deer park, along with shows including trained bears, aquatic performances and karate exhibitions.

Knott's Berry Farm is probably the oldest man-made attraction in the area, now complete with an old western town, gold panning and a variety of novel rides and restaurants.

The wax museum is overwhelming in the realistic number of Hollywood personalities, past and present, set in scenes from their most famous motion pictures or television shows.

Hotels and motels abound in the area of these attractions.

Not too far distant is Lion Country Safari where visitors can remain in their cars and drive through wild-like landscape with all manner of exotic beasts roaming around.

The star, of course, is the indomitable sire of more cubs than any male lion on the premises, old Frasier himself.

But to the Southern California visitor this is only the beginning. Driving into Los Angeles itself, the tourist can spend the better part of a day visiting Olvera Street, a replica of a small Mexican village with its shops, restaurants and craftsmen at work.

Within walking distance is Little Tokyo and Chinatown. Both are distinctive and more than simply tourist attractions.

They are the cultural and entertainment centers of the Oriental colonies in this part of the world. The food is genuine and the people gracious.

For the fortunate there are always tickets to be had to the filming of such television shows as "The Mary Tyler Moore Show," "Here's Lucy," "All in the Family" and others.

Farther out in the valley lies Magic Mountain, another amusement park with rides, restaurants and excitement for youngsters and parents alike.

McGovern is currently running behind among both the Catholic and trade union vote, while Kennedy is ahead among both groups of voters.

Kennedy also does substantially better than McGovern among blacks and voters with incomes of $5,000-$10,000:

McGOVERN AND KENNEDY APPEAL AMONG COLLEGE EDUCATED AND INDEPENDENT VOTERS

Two-way Race
Nixon	53	58

Not Sure	5	4

By contrast, McGovern is within striking distance among the college educated and independents, although behind with both groups today. In May, McGovern was behind by only four points among the college educated and was tied with the President among independents. But Kennedy has consistently run between 10 and 15 points behind with both segments all year.

Both McGovern and Kennedy have a solid base of young people to build on. But from that point on, both have vastly different appeals, representing the old and the new in politics. Whether putting them both on the same ticket would give the Democrats the best of both worlds, or the worst, only time and the Democratic convention can tell.

Alan King finally has own series

NEW YORK (UPI) — At long last, Alan King has his own television comedy series.

But not as it was supposed to be — as the performing star. He's made it as the creator-producer of a weekly summer series, "The Corner Bar," which begins Wednesday on the ABC network, 8:30-9 p.m.

"I gave up that idea of a starring weekly comedy series for myself," said the square-jawed, square-framed performer who has been one of the most in-demand, best-paid standup comedians for more than a decade.

"Over a period of several years, I made pilots for half a dozen comedy series. Nothing happened with any of them. Meanwhile, I was doing fine as a solo specialist under an NBC contract. I produced some Broadway shows. I starred on Broadway in 'The Impossible Years' for a year and played all of the night club dates I could handle.

"But I never sold a television series. Looking back, maybe subconsciously I never really wanted to be tied up in a series as an actor. It was always other people who were pushing me in that direction."

Now, King, under a new three-year contract with the American Broadcasting Company that gives him great autonomy in various directions, is making his first contribution with the 10-week "The Corner Bar" series, which, if successful enough, well might turn up on the network midway of the coming 1972-73 season as a replacement for some faltering new program. Alan King Productions owns the package.

"I've tried simply for good basic comedy," King said. "Where do you find more varied types, more freedom of expression than in a neighborhood bar? People relax there. There is humor that stems from human nature that you'll find nowhere else."

The star of the summer series is Gabriel Dell, one of the original "Dead End Kids" of stage and screen who has been a fine actor for many years. He plays Harry Grant, owner of the bar.

Then, it's back to another phase of his ABC contract, starring in the first of two made-for-video "Movie of the Week" films for the network.

In this one, "The Leisure Trap," he plays a plumber with time on his hands because of a four-day week who decides to use his spare time to help out in a Spanish Harlem ghetto. He'll serve only as producer for the second film.

King will no sooner finish "The Leisure Trap" than he'll be off to Las Vegas for his second of two annual personal appearances at Caesars Palace.

Then back to New York for more ABC work of one kind or another.

"When things get too hectic, know what I do?" King asked. "I take off for an hour or so and relax in a corner bar."

Spurting blood 'definitely' sets violent climate

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Does the sight of blood spurting realistically from a gunshot wound in a violent motion picture set a climate of violence for audiences?

"Definitely," said Arthur P. Jacobs, producer of the "Planet of the Apes" pictures, the third sequel of which is being released this summer.

"I've heard all the arguments pro and con," he said.

"Some people say we were raised on cowboy and Indian pictures and war pictures during the 1930s and '40s. Maybe so. But usually we saw the gun fired and a man fall. There wasn't any detailed close-up of the wound. And blood was a rarity.

"The overall effect was one of illusion. Fantasy. Today it's a different story. Personally, I think there was too much violence in "The Godfather." They didn't need it."

Jacobs singled out "A Clockwork Orange" and "Straw Dogs" as excessively violent movies made for the sole purpose of exciting audiences on the basis of the amount of gore spilled.

"An immature mind can be affected by these pictures," he said. "This atmosphere adds to the violence, shootings, crime and upheaval.

"I think producers have a responsibility to audiences to cut down on violence. Of course a man like Stanley Kubrick makes a point of saying 'Clockwork Orange' has such a high degree of violence that it has the opposite affect on people. It turns them away from violence.

"I don't agree. Sometimes violence is a possible substitute for talent with some picture makers."

Jacobs' newest movie, "Conquest of the Planet of the Apes," is being made in three versions for different markets.

"Our main version is for the United States and most other countries," he explained. "The second is for Japan. They can't get enough violence and blood in their pictures and demand more of ours. So the version that goes to Japan is really violent.

"But the one seen in the United Kingdom has almost all the violence removed. If not we'll get an X-rating, which is ridiculous for a fantasy picture in which a band of apes fight off the police.

"But all of our ape pictures have had a tremendous appeal for children. So we've cut seven scenes so far for the British market."

Jacobs' other films, "Doctor Dolittle," "Goodbye, Mr. Chips" and "Play It Again, Sam" — among others — have been virtually without violence. He blames "Straw Dogs" and "Clockwork Orange" for England's overreaction to violence.

"The papers over there ran front page stories about those pictures and the violence," he concluded. "That makes it more difficult for everyone else.

The producer should have no trouble with his next project — "Tom Sawyer" — unless the Japanese demand the kid pull a knife on Indian Joe.

Bit Parts: Herbert Ross will produce and direct "The Last of Sheila," a sophisticated mystery for Warner Bros. ...

Season Hubley will play a guest star role in a segment of "The Partridge Family" ... Rod Steiger has been signed to star in "The Heroes" and "The Crackup" following his role in "The Lolly Madonna War" ...
